WAITED SIX YEARS TO ENTER MOTION PICTURES

Richard Walton Tully's First Production Will Be "The Masquerader" Starring Guy Bates Post.

So much has been written about methods of motion picture production that the case of Richard Walton Tully deserves particular mention, chiefly by contrast. This eminent producer, whose efforts in the amusement field have brought out such successes of the legitimate stage as "The Masquerader," "The Bird of Paradise," "The Rose of the Rancho" and "Omaz, the Tent-maker," has waited exactly a half dozen years before putting his ambition of entering the silent drama into accomplishment. The delay, he declares, was due to his desire to gain an accurate insight into the methods that could best insure the production of satisfactory pictures.

Mr. Tully's first offering is "The Masquerader," which will be the attraction, released by First National, at the Arcade Theatre next Monday, Guy Bates Post, who has been identified with most of Mr. Tully's stage triumphs, and who has for three years played the title role in the stage version of "The Masquerader," has the same part in the picture, taking the double role of John Chittico, M. P., and John Leder.

Mr. Tully has chosen his cast with the same deliberation that marked his entrance into the film producing industry. Ruth Stuelow plays the feminine lead opposite Post, while the other members are Edward M. Kimball, Herbert Standing, Lawson Butt, Marcia Mann, Barbara Tennant and Kenneth Gibson. James Young directed this picture.

AT SHERRY'S—LAST DAY "MY DAD"

For sheer drama it would be difficult to find a motion picture to beat "My Dad," in which Johnnie Walker of "Over the Hill" fame makes his debut as an R-C star. The nobility of self-sacrifice, the heroism of a son in fighting to prove his father innocent of a murder, forms the theme of this most gripping picture. And it is a story that fits Johnnie Walker as snugly as the proverbial glove. It shows him struggling through frozen trails raking his life in tremendous blizzards, suffering the tortures of the numbing cold until he reaches the cabin of the man from whom he can obtain the evidence to prove his father innocent.

There are any number of big dramatic episodes in "My Dad." More over it is filled with the elusive quality we call "heart interest." The love of the son for the father will chisel into the hearts of all beholders.

Ruth Clifford as the girl also gives a fine performance and the broad reaches of the snow lands and towering timbers form a striking frame for her beauty. Other players of high calibre make up the cast. Also showing a comedy.

JACK HOLT STARS IN PICTURE AT ARCADE

Jack Holt immortalizes the role of the Fighting Parson in his second Paramount starring feature, "While Satan Sleeps," which is being shown at the Arcade theatre today and Thursday. He is not, however, the out-and-out fighting parson, but a crook who poses as a preacher to ward off suspicion when he goes out to rob the bank in a small western mining town. But the faith of the people of the town in him and the confidence of a dying dance hall girl who has been mortally wounded in an effort to shield him from a gunman's bullet awakens faith in himself and he finishes by reforming not only himself but the entire town.

Grizzi Brunette plays the leading feminine role—the dance hall proprietor's daughter, and the other colorful characterizations are splendidly portrayed by Wade Boteler, J. P. Lockney, Mabel Van Buren, Will R. Walling, Fred Huntley, Betty Francisco, Hobby Mack, Sylvia Ashton and Herbert Standing, of the Paramount stock company.

A two reel comedy is on the same program.
