WITHHOLD NOT GOOD:—Withhold not good from them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it.—Proverbs 3: 27.

The Unruly Tongue.

The disposition to say cutting and untrue things about peole is not less today among many than it was when the news of the community was carried around by persons who were known as news mongers. It is very easy to utter these things, but the injustice is so apparent that if anyone would stop to think before he spoke he would surely refrain from the untruths, or even imaginary things.

Recently it came to us that a very well meaning man living in the Grande Ronde valley stated at a public meeting that thousands of dollars had been made from the road bonds by a La Grande individual, when as a matter of fact that party never made a single cent from road bonds, road work or road contracts. There never was any possibility of such a thing, yet this man who loves to talk uttered the statement as a fact. The damage is that others hearing him say such a thing may also repeat it as a fact, and thereby a permanent injustice is done.

Such statements do not pay. They come home to roost sooner or later, and the unruly tongue should be guarded with the utmost care. If one does not know a thing he should keep his mouth shut. If he does positively know that graft exists then he should tell it wherever he has the opportunity, but always be on the safe side and ready to prove statements.

Secretary Irvine.

In selecting Ward Irvine as private secretary the new governor of Oregon exercised mighty good judgment, for Ward Irvine, while a young man, has the ability, bearing and poise so hard to find in the man who meets the public and councils with the chief executive on every matter.

He is an Oregon product and comes from stock which rings true in the desire to see the state advance, to see the agricultural sections relieved and to see the state take her rightful place among the other commonwealths as to development.

Secretary Irvine is a son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Irvine, formerly of Corvallis but now residents of Portland where Mr. Irvine is employed as editor of the Portland Journal. The young man is an exponent of the new blench in Oregon who will take over governmental affairs in due time and his entrance into the governor's office with Mr. Pierce will season him for bigger undertakings as time goes on. We believe that a better selection could not have been made by the new administratino for this important place.

Winter in the Grande Ronde.

Winter has its beauties which summer can never duplicate, just as summer has its beauties that would defy winter to attempt to duplicate. After the long, pleasant summer in Eastern Oregon comes the frosty mornings warning all that fuel bins need filling, that warmer clothes are essential. Then slowly but surely winter breaks upon us, just as it has the last few days.

The snow clings to tree branches and boughs, covers the hills and artistically and gracefully adorns everything in sight. To look across the valley whitened with the winter coat causes full appreciation of the greatness of nature in a country that claims pronounced seasons. To hear the joyful screams of boys and girls who are coasting on hills and see their ruddy cheeks radiating health and happiness makes one refuse to consider living in a country that does not have a winter such as the Grande Ronde valley can properly boast of.

"Old Oregon."

The Oregon university has stepped a few paces in the lead with her magazine captioned, "Old Oregon." It comes very near breathing farewell to the amateur and taking its place alongside the high-grade, well arranged and carefully printed monthly publications of the country. The title page for the December issue is a work of art in the printing industry and the press work is standard at least, if not a little better.

Its pages are filled with well written articles, subjects of interest being treated in a snappy yet well balanced manner. The cuts used are appropriate and in most instances are well printed, showing advancement in pressowork, wich is always essential to the proper appearance of any printed matter.

The students upon whose shoulders rest the responsibility of this magazine have every reason to feel joyful over their efforts.

Boise's Main Line Campaign.

We hope Boise will succeed in her campaign to get the main line of the Union Pacific system relaid so that it will touch the capital city of Idaho. It should have been done years ago, for a town as fine as Boise should never be content to be on a branch line of a transcontinental railroad.

There are so many good citizens in Boise all possess of energy and ability that we believe their efforts this time will be successful.

Unfortunately, the things which one imagines do not always coincide with the facts.

Turkey may be at the table at Lausanne, but it isn't on it.

THE OFFICE CAT

CHRISTMAS, 1922

'Twas the night before Christmas
When all through the house,
Not a creature was stirring,
Not even a mouse.

The buckets were placed
By the chimney with care
In hopes that the Coal Man
Soon would be there.

Although it may seem a bit early to think of Christmas time, guess we had better start counting our last few shekels and prepare to kiss them good-bye. Friend wife will soon be around to do her annual "Jimmy Valentine" on our wallet so that she can sally forth to buy up all the useless gifts in town. Oh! Why is Christmas?

About all we expect in return is the usual:

Yellow and pink checkered necktie that we wouldn't wear to a buff fight.

A box of "El Cabbage de Punkos" with which we can later insult the janitor.

Two or three "false front" silk shirts in colors fit for a jockey.

And perhaps a dozen pairs of "Puncture" brand silk socks—"guaranteed to be shot in heel in six months or your money refunded."

If we carried a lot of insurance on our life, here are some of the gifts we would make:

For the Butcher, whose hand we have bought time and time again, a scale with enough electricity charging through it to knock him on his ear every time he as much as puts a finger on it.

For Ike Milliman: A pair of wings so we wouldn't have to listen to his horseshoe hoss falls coming up the back alley in the wee hours of the morn.

For the Janitor: A pocket radio outfit, so we could locate him once in a while.

For the family upstairs: A steam fire hydrant to enable them to shake the foundations of the building in more efficient style.

For our neighbor's cat: An unhealthy dose of chloroform. It sleeps all day and warbles all night with cry a lot-up.

And last but not least, for friend wife: "Maxim Silencer, to be put on at regular intervals so that she could come up for air once in a while.

Don't judge a man by his appearance. He may be supporting an automobile.

COAST IS TO SUPPLY TRADE WITH LUMBER

of their stocks to the lowest point to ascertain values.

Pacific Coast Production Small

And for other hand there has been no little increase in the productive capacity of the Pacific Coast since before the war. Its future increase will probably be slow compared with the worldwide decline of production in the South, and nothing like as rapid as the expansion of production in the south in the latter months as the railroads and eastern lumber supplies fell off.

Other weeks of opening up timber stands on the West Coast are numerous among them in the South and the climatic conditions, distance from markets, etc., are such that whereas an investment of $4.00 per thousand feet of production on the basis of present log conditions, sufficient at the time of the depletion of the timber in the North and the early development of the industry in the south, it takes over $100 per thousand feet of annual production capacity to capitalize a typical lumber enterprise on the Pacific Coast. The capital will be suffered slowly, and probably only after a number of years of profitable business without the new construction.

It is to be remembered that the same time the south's lumber industry is increasing its home consumption it looks to be rapidly developed and manufacturing capacity. To this cause, if the depletion of the timber supply proceeds as is indicated from the statistics now available, it is not at all improbable that the next wave of the westward lumber movement in the South will be connected in the territory north of the Ohio, Missouri and the Great Plains, making practically all of the northern parts of those states and most of the Rocky Mountains the natural source for lumber requirements of the West Coast mills.
