JACKIE COOGAN AGAIN SCORES A BULLSEYE

In "Trouble," which opened at the Arcade Theatre yesterday for a run of three days, Jackie Coogan again scores a bullseye.

If anything, the little star is better in this than he was in the memorable Chaplin film, because in the latter case it was hard to determine just how much of his work was Coogan and how much Chaplin. In his latest production, released under the First National trademark, there is no cause for doubt. It is all Coogan and the baby artist proves his right to a place among the truly great stars of the screen.

To see Jackie as a witness in a police court, when he describes a fight between his foster father and a policeman, is to see the perfection of pantomime. The audience sees the fight in the regular course of the picture, but even if it hadn't, the gestures and expressions of the diminutive witness would visualize the struggle. He goes through all the motions, even to describing how he felled his bullying parent with a flower pot and helped the policeman, who had been temporarily worsted in the fight, to put the handcuffs on the offender.

There is more story to "Trouble" than any of the plays in which Jackie has appeared, even including "The Kid." He is discovered at the outset as a voluntary vagrant, sleeping in a barrel because he had run away from an orphanage that refused to house his dog, "Queenie." A policeman takes him back to the home and shortly afterward Jackie is adopted by the wife of a shiftless plumber. The man is lazy and a wife beater. When he refuses to go to attend to a job, Jackie substitutes for him, but manages to make a leaking water pipe a geyser that floods cellar, bathroom and kitchen. There is lots of real fun in this scene. However, Jackie gets a five dollar bill for trying to fix the pipe and when he takes it home the worthless foster father takes it away from the wife. This leads to a quarrel that ends in the man brutalizing her, and when a policeman comes in a terrific fight occurs. With Jackie's aid, the ruffian is subdued and taken to jail. Hence the big scene where Jackie establishes himself once and for all as a marvelous pantomimist.

If there were nothing else in "Trouble" but this scene, it would be worth seeing. But there are numerous moments of unalloyed fun, and besides the little fellow is surrounded by a strong cast, headed by Gloria Hope and Wallace Beery as the foster parents.

You will feel better for having seen "Trouble."

SHERRY'S TODAY—LAST DAY "COLLEEN OF THE PINES"

A drama that moves with the refreshing sweep of a strong wind through tall timbers was revealed for the first time at the Sherry Theatre yesterday when "Colleen of the Pines" starring Jane Novak, was thrown upon the screen.

The delicate blonde beauty of the star, her superb handling of the big scenes and the excellent support of the cast, all contribute toward the success of the production.

The nobility of self-sacrifice is the theme. As the elder sister, Miss Novak takes upon her own slender shoulders the burden of a mistake committed by her younger sister. The father is a religious bigot whose family has been brought up under the most rigid regulations. They form an interesting group of characters, however, out of whose lives a strong drama has been woven. It's a Chester Bennett production.

Also a two-reel drama "Hell's Fury Gordon."

SHERRY'S — SUNDAY, MONDAY "IF YOU BELIEVE IT, IT'S SO"

Perley Poore Sheehan's widely-read novel, "If You Believe It, It's So" has reached the screen as a Paramount picture with Thomas Meighan as the star. The story of a young city crook who finds peace and happiness in the country is delightfully told by a cast of players which includes, in addition to the star, Theodore Roberts, Pauline Stark, Joseph J. Dowling and Charles Ogle. The picture comes to the Sherry Theatre next Sunday and Monday.

Chinese Women Gossip. According to one authority the upper class women of China give little attention to serious affairs, spending most of their time in gossiping and gambling.

Chaucer. I know not whether to marvel more, either that he in that misty time could see so clearly, or that we, in this clear age, walk so stumblingly after him.—Sir Philip Sidney.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.
