Valentine's Day

The lover who sent the first Valentine ranks with the inventor of Santa Claus, among the great Unknowns in history. Few men have done as much to make this a joyous world. Surely no one has done more to color life and romance. For no life is worthwhile unless it attracts and radiates love — and the valentine is the messenger of Cupid.

If you are on the shady side of youth, there are few memories you can look back to, with the thrill and tenderness of the valentines of school days. Sometimes we wonder what became of those first sweethearts of youth—the shy little lassie in the gingham pinafore, the sweetheart of the old-time sleighride, the romantic love of our late teens and early twenties. You remember those valentines you sent them? "Them was the days." Looking backward, the valentine days are rosy lanterns in the mists of the past.

Those greatest sweethearts, our wives, may be getting gray. But the old-time love is in their hearts. The thrill of a valentine to them is as tense and glamorous as long ago. This is Valentine Day, and all sweethearts, white-haired or young, yearn for remembrance—violets, candy or, best of all, an honest-to-goodness valentine.

Hope for Others

King Tutankhamen was quite a personage in Egypt at one period a few thousand years ago. In his own view there was no doubt the "All Highest" of that age. Egyptian monarch had fine opinions of themselves and exacted reverence in semblance at least from all their subjects. Possibly he felt that much of that which makes the world a good place of residence would be gone when he went out. Therefore he took with him to the tomb about all the goods which could be stuffed in, if the reports are accurate. It was felt, doubtless, that he had a fine funeral even for a Pharaoh and that full honor was done his memory.

Now peoples of whom Tutankhamen never heard have dug into his tomb and he has more fame in death than in life. "Imperious Caesar dead and turned to clay might stop a whole to keep the wind away," but a better fate seems to await Tutankhamen, who is destined more probably to provide an attraction for a museum where what is left of him will be carefully preserved. Thus whatever notoriety he possessed in the land of Egypt was small in comparison with what he has now.

The example should not be lost on those who may feel that they are not appreciated in life. Perhaps honor will come along after death. That thought might comfort the ex-kaiser. Tutankhamen is nothing but a mummy now, but in some instances that might be preferred to the living persons.

quantities varied, by common acceptance among all Christian Communions the forty day period is now observed; and not without reason since "forty" is a scriptural number. For forty years, for illustration, the children of Israel were under discipline in the Wilderness. Moses fasted forty days in the Mount. Elijah was forty days in the Wilderness. For forty days, Christ fasted before entering upon his public ministry. Beginning with Ash Wednesday the Lenten Season really covers a period of forty six days, but as Sunday has always been regarded as a Feast. These six Sundays are not counted as belonging to the Fast.

The word Lent is derived from the old Anglo-Saxon word Lencten, meaning Spring, and, as the fast falls in the early part of the year, by common usage Lent is now generally associated with the beginning of Spring, which comes to full flower with the Easter Festival of the Resurrection.

As with all these ancient festivals many quaint and curious customs attaching to Lent have been handed down through the ages. In medieval times, meat, eggs and milk were forbidden in Lent, not only by ecclesiastical, but by statute law. It is from this prohibition of the eating of eggs, that the Easter egg custom of modern times grew. The chief Lenten food from the earliest days was fish and in the England of Edward III herring pies were so great a delicacy that charters granted to seaports often stipulated that the town should send as many herrings or other fish to the King during the Lenten Season. The strictest abstinence enforced, and to such an extent that during the Siege of Orleans in 1429 the besieging army was reduced to starvation thru lack of Lenten food, though in full possession of meat and other supplies.

A writer in the Encyclopedia Britannica, states that the Battle of the Herrings, February, 1429, was fought to cover the march of the convoy of Lenten food to the British Army before the beleaguered city.

This strict observance of Lent has gradually been softened, though it continued to be incalculable by such earnest churchmen as William Law and John Wesley; and the custom of women wearing mourning in Lent, which had been followed by Queen Elizabeth and her court, survived well into the Nineteenth Century. Here, in America, in the Roman Catholic as well as in the Episcopal and Lutheran churches, while conformation to the rules laid down for fasting is urged, a tolerant policy is observed and the devout are neither required nor expected to engage in such fasting as might be deleterious to health.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of mess.
