THEATRES

SHERRY'S TODAY

STUPENDOUS SETS USED IN
"LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY" Most Expensive Production Ever Made by Mary Pickford

Mary Pickford has probably never done a photoplay in which so little location work was required as in her current United Artists offering, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," to be featured at the Sherry theater, beginning today.

With the exception of a trip to Burlingame, Calif., where the castle exteriors were taken, the entire picture was made in Los Angeles at the headquarters for the Pickford force, "The New York street scenes, that "Little Lord Fauntleroy" is an economical picture. On the contrary, it is by far the most expensive cinema undertaking Little Mary ever attempted. The cost of the sets alone runs in figures that sound like a statement of America's war debt. In addition to the largest interior set ever built, there were several exteriors that were gigantic in size and stupendous in cost. Despite the fact that every effort was exercised to bring down expenditures, the nature of these settings necessitated a tremendous outlay of money in order that they might be interesting, realistic and artistic.

Among the settings that are bound to provoke much favorable comment are the interiors of Dorincourt Castle, the New York street scenes, the Dorincourt Lodge, and the peasant home of Mrs. Higgins.

The widest extremes possible are represented in these reproductions, built as they are from the vivid colorful descriptions of Mrs. Burnett, author of this perennially popular tale. The various sets in these sets forms the basis upon which is built the all-encompassing drama, pathos and uproarious comedy of the story.

Those who have learned to love the Little Lord Fauntleroy the author pictured, as well as the atmosphere in which he lived, will view Miss Pickford's cinematization of this wonderful novel with a genuine delight. The faithfulness and fidelity with which she has reproduced the romantic locals in which the story is steeped is truly a credit to the genius of the one and only Mary.

To insure correctness of detail, especially in connection with everything pertaining to the English portion of the picture, Miss Pickford employed a "period expert" who had spent practically all his life in the service of the British nobility.

The man who directed the sets toured England while studying abroad, and he has expressed in his work the result of several years of study and observation of English castle architecture.

These and many other interesting features contribute to make "Little Lord Fauntleroy" the most stupendous Pickford picture, and one of the greatest film ever flashed on any screen.

"OREGON TRAIL" OPENS
AT ARCADE WEDNESDAY

About the time that Marcus Whitman, the celebrated missionary, started on his famous pilgrimage to Oregon, there lived near Wallatpu, a young trapper of French descent named Jean Brulet. He was an independent and had won the enmity of the local fur syndicate chief or factor and of his agent Rene Coulier.

Brulet and Coulier first came to blows when the fur agent incited renegade Indians to attack Hernandez Velasquez, ancient Spanish Don and owner of a large tract of land desired by the fur syndicate.

Hernandez was wounded by an arrow, but his life, and that of his granddaughter, Rosita, were saved.
 Jean, who chased the intruders away after a spirited hand-to-hand fight, sprang up a bond of interest between Jean and Rosita.

Sometime later, at the trading post, Coulier planned vengeance on Brulet. He incited a half-breed to pick a fight with Jean in the bar.
 Then Coulier secretly shot the half-breed and accused Jean, who escaped only by his bravery. Mounted on his prize horse, Fleetfoot, he soon was hidden in the forest, but returned to the vicinity of his assailants when he discovered that his dog, Jerry, had been left behind.

How Rosita saved Jean's life at this juncture, and how they later hear of Whitman's approach and of the plots and intrigues against him by the renegade fur traders and Indians, and how they cast their lot with the Missionary against great odds and continued adventures of the most thrilling kind, is told in stirring scenes in the succeeding chapters of this historical chapter picture "The Oregon Trail."

PLANT NEARLY DONE.
 HOOD RIVER, O., April 3.—J. E.
 Shinn, superintendent of construction of the Phoenix Light company, announced yesterday that the concern would complete by April 15 a $1,250, 000 hydro-electric plant for the Pacific Power & Light company on Hood River just south of this city. The plant, work on which was begun last summer, will develop 7500 horse power. It will be the largest plant owned by the Pacific Power & Light company, the system of which covers eastern Oregon and Washington.

 Originally it had been anticipated that the turbine of the big power plant would be turning by April 1.
 Unprecedented floods in Hood River in January, however, delayed crews.
