PROMPT LOADING OF CARS IS URGED

Western shippers are urged by the Southern Pacific company to load freight cars promptly and to capacity and so avoid the destructive effects of a car shortage.

G. W. Luce, Freight Traffic Manager for the company, said today that as a result of the recent rains there is every indication that bumper crops will be enjoyed this summer and fall, and that the railroad facilities of the country will be taxed to handle the extraordinarily heavy traffic that is expected.

"In the last nine months the railroads have handled the greatest volume of traffic ever transported in the history of the country during any corresponding period," said Luce. "Traffic in 1923 up to the first of April has reached a new high level. If traffic over the country continues to increase as it has, it can be handled only by the most rigid economy in the use of cars. The West, with its heavy tonnage to move across the continent to eastern markets, has no transportation to waste.

"Southern Pacific company has spent many millions of dollars since last season for new freight cars, particularly refrigerators, and for modern improvements of the most powerful type. But with unprecedented traffic, chiefly in products that run sharply into peak shipments, in prospect, it is evident that only the closest co-operation of shippers with the railroads can avert a car shortage with consequent loss to both."

MOTION OVERRULED. (By Associated Press) PORTLAND, Apr. 21.—Judge Rossman today overruled a motion for non-suit in the Garland case against Clifford, Powell, Hall, Foster and other members of the Ku Klux Klan. Hamilton Johnston, listed as a member of the executive committee of the public defense league which engineered the recount, was the first witness. Rossman ruled out his testimony concerning local publications, which Garland contended favored the Klan, saying he did not think the Klan was on trial.

Mr. Sloan has a flock of pure bred Hampshire sheep at his place that is not excelled by any fine sheep in the Pacific Northwest. He selected his stock from two well known flocks, that of J. H. Reuk of Meriden, and Joseph Seavers of Castle Rock. This was in the autumn of 1919. Mr. Sloan purchased at this time seven ewes and one ram, no he has 93 head of registered sheep and all typical Hampshires, besides what he has sold.

Mr. Sloan had one lamb weigh 163 pounds when it was one hundred days old which proves that he is right in keeping pure bred sheep. He has his lambs come in January and February. He now has a number of lambs on hand that weigh 80 lbs.

The wool of his pure bred Hampshire grades high and is now in good demand and bringing good prices. The wool is clean, light and fluffy and has a strong fiber. His lambing averaged high this year.

Mr. Sloan will visit Boise fair this summer where he will meet with the best breeders of sheep in this section for the purpose of selecting of flock heads for the coming year for his flock. During this trip he plans on visiting Thousand Springs Ranch and other well known flocks so as to get the best for his own hand.

Mr. Sloan finds a ready sale for his rams and keeps his ewes for flock builders. He belongs to the association of the breeders of Pure bred Hampshire sheep and is in fact a life member. Mr. Sloan has lived in North Powder for several years and is well known in this section. He has been connected with the sheep in industry for years and saw the need of pure bred sheep at home without having to have them shipped in.

If you will study the book of good managers industriously, you may in time climb high enough to justify a convention.

King Tut-ankh-Amen's Middle Name Was Copper, or "the Enduring Life"

Through 6,000 years the two have been associated in minds of men.

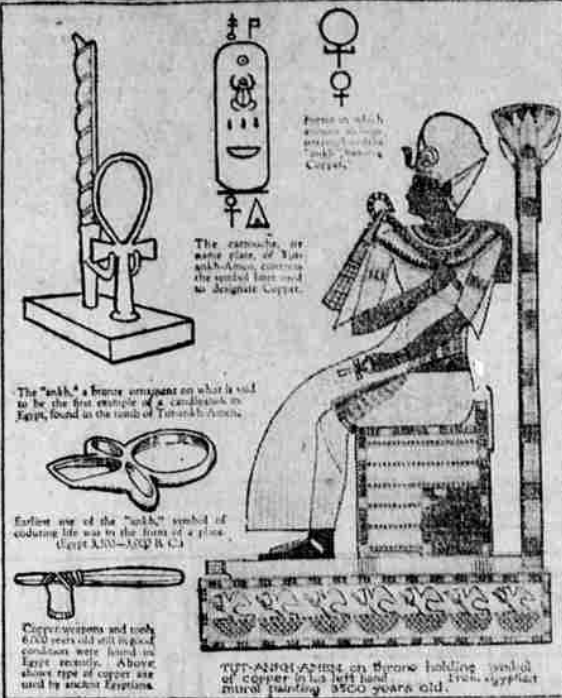

WHEN the two life-sized statues of Tut-ankh-Amen, the boy Pharaoh of the 18th Egyptian Dynasty, were found recently by the archeologists under the leadership of the Earl of Carnarvon they pictured vividly to modern eyes the connection, 6,000 years old, between the ever elusive riddle of the enduring life and copper, the earliest metal widely used by mankind.

The Egyptian mind, as indeed the human mind throughout the long history of man, was always persistently searching for ways of prolonging life. Copper, which possessed this quality of enduring life, had been used in the valley of the Nile since before the Dynastic days, or over 2,500 years before the time of Tut-ankh-Amen. Bronze was introduced in the 4th Dynasty.

Copper made a strong appeal to the imagination of the people, both because of its usefulness and its endurance, and because in early days it was connected in thought with the "ankh" which was the symbol of the enduring life, throughout the thousands of years from Tut-ankh-Amen, who bore the word as his middle name, to the alchemists of the 15th century A. D.

The "ankh" visualized to the Pharaoh the hope of a second existence for which, as seen from the equipment of their tombs, he made ample provision looking toward the time 3,000 years after his death, when he believed he would take up a new life and have need for comforts and ornaments of all kinds.

Much of the copper used in Egypt came from the island of Cyprus, from which it received its name. It is significant that the "ankh", still denoting enduring life, was found in the person of the goddess Venus, who was said to have sprung from the foam of the sea and to have been wafted on the crests of the waves to Cyprus. Her symbol was the "ankh", the same symbol that was used centuries later by the hearty students of forbidden hermetic arts to represent copper.

Venus was an outgrowth of the same idea that found expression and deification in the Egyptian goddess Hathor. So there is an unbroken line, through the "ankh" of the enduring life in the earliest Egyptian days, the "ankh" as used in Tut-ankh-Amen's name, the "ankh" as symbol of Venus or Aphrodite, to the "ankh" which was the secret sign for copper used by the alchemists, medi-

WORLDY. M. C. A. CAUCUS SLATED

Nine hundred representatives of nearly 50 countries, with a full quota of delegates from America, will meet May 20 to June 10 to discuss the place of boyhood in the nations of the world and the relation thereof to the Y. M. C. A. This "Second World's Conference of Y. M. C. A. Workers With Boys" will be held at Durbach and See, Austria. The first was held at Oxford, England, just before the outbreak of the great war.

Evidence of the rapidly expanding interest in dealing with problems of boyhood is afforded, conference leaders point out, by the fact that the 900 registrants exceed by 50 per cent the number originally planned for. A special auditorium is being erected for the meetings.

E. M. Robinson, long a leader in association work for boys in many countries, is supervising arrangements for the conference from the headquarters of the world's committee of the Y. M. C. A. in Geneva, Switzerland.
