AUTO IS ALLY TO CRIMINAL

CHICAGO, May 7.—The motor car of today, in the hands of thieves and robbers, has far outstripped the stolen horse of pioneer days as an ally to crime, says the Chicago crime commission in its latest bulletin.

While the horse thief in the days when justice was stern and swift might see himself dangling from a gallows, the auto criminal has a different mental picture in the event of capture, according to the commission. His modern view includes arrest, release on bond, conferences in the well furnished offices of the criminal attorney, trips to court, delays, possible conviction, a new bond, appeal to the supreme court, the "fixing" of witnesses and escape.

Motor cars were a factor in 355 felony cases in Chicago in 1922, the commission points out, but the criminal court increased the percentage of defendants penalized in 1922 to 37 per cent, as compared to 25 per cent in 1921.

Ninety per cent of Chicago robberies, in the opinion of these experts, are preceded by the theft of an automobile, and in 1922, 2,067 robberies were committed. These involved 115 defendants charged with robbery with a gun in cases where automobiles were taken from their possessors. Of these 115, only 12 suffered penalties, seven going to the penitentiary, four to the reformatory and one to the house of correction.

During the year 15 manslaughter cases were called in criminal court and only one of the defendants was penalized. He received a reformatory sentence, according to those records.

The funniest thing about us is that we always cheer loudest when the orator tells us we are a great people.
