HUGE CIRCUS ELEPHANTS ARE PETS COMPARED TO AFRICAN VARIETY

H. A. Snow's "Hunting Big Game in Africa with Gun and Camera" which will be presented at the Star Theater Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday is going to startle folks whose only visualization of wild creatures is of the zoo or menagerie. The big game presented is from one-third to two-thirds larger than the captive animals in the menagerie. Means have been found of picturing many of the larger wild animals in close-ups. Actual combats are shown, and each hunt is a thrilling continuity from the first tracking to the stopping of the charging animal by Mr. Snow's gun. The story begins on the west coast of Africa, then South Africa is visited, native "jazz" fashions and ceremonies are recorded, the Kimberly diamond fields are explored, and soon the grand safari starts via Mombasa toward the equator. The elephant train constituted the only roads into the vast crater or bowl of an extinct volcano, where the party nearly lost their lives by a elephant stampede. Attacks on their camp by lions, leopards, hyenas and other prowlers were an almost nightly occurrence. When an ant army invaded, refuge was found only by placing the sleeping cots in the river. There were many other hardships, privations and breath-taking escapes, but out of it all the Snow party emerged in 1922 with the most complete collection of museum specimens ever made and a series of pictures for the first time portray the Kingdom of Beasts in matchless splendor and reality. This picture comes here after an engagement of three solid months in New York City, where it played to capacity audiences, averaging 20,000 a week.

LABOR EARNS WHAT IT GETS Christian Science Monitor: Julius H. Barnes, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, showed that he was a man of large vision when, in an address at Washington the other day, he declared that wages ought never to return to their pre-war level, because it is an inherent right of the masses of the people of a great nation to enjoy sufficient returns for their efforts to enable them to obtain at least a fair share of the good things the civilization of the world is producing. (Why, indeed, should not a laboring man travel to his work in his own car? There is probably no greater fallacy than the assumption that a large part of the people of a nation must always be poor and put up with hardships. That is a doctrine of the Middle Ages.

STERLING HILL AT ARCADE THEATER TODAY "Pawned," the photoplay version of a Frank L. Packard story published first in Munsey's Magazine and later in book form, is announced as the attraction for the Arcade theater today and Tuesday. J. Parker Reed, Jr., is responsible for the production which is being distributed by Select Pictures Corporation. The interpreting cast is headed by Tom Moore and Edith Roberts and also includes such well known screen favorites as Charles Grand, James Harrows and Josef Swickard. "Pawned" is frankly and freely melodramatic. The story starts in the South Sea islands and winds up in the heart of New York's picturesque East Side. There are thrilling and mysterious guises, plenty of physical combat and finally one of the
