Observer Want Ads Bring Results.

My attention has been called to a notice appearing in the Observer stating that certain advertisements which have been run in my behalf is an evidence of my determination to work against the interests of the Old Oregon Trail association and of the Pageant to be held on July 4. It is only my just due that the people should understand that this notice is utterly unfair. I am not against the Association and am not against the Pageant. The fact is merely this: that I own a body of land at Meacham adjoining the lands selected by the committee for the Old Oregon Trail celebration. I offered to rent this land to the Pageant Association for less money than I can get for it from private persons. The Association saw fit not to rent the land. That was their business. Now I desire to permit others to use the land if they wish to do so. This I feel is my business and there is no reason why I should be criticized for making fair use of my own property after having given first opportunity to the Pageant Association. My property is very desirable for any kind of a concession in connection with the Pageant and I deem it only fair that people who are looking for desirable locations shall have a chance to know of the propositions which I have to offer. "That's the Gas for Me"

ALL this gasology about the gravity, end point, doctor test and initial specifications is gasology alright—pure and simple.

It means about as much to the average motorist as gastric juices mean to the ostrich that relishes door knobs and what-nots for his breakfast.

But here's some VELTEX specifications that don't require someone suffering from exasperation to comprehend—VELTEX is a high grade, volatile gas that is clean and powerful. It is deodorized by an acid treatment which removes all foreign substances and the acid is washed out with pure water.

When you want a gas that will give you super-power, start snappy and reel off an unusual number of miles per gallon, drive up to a filling station and say "Gimme five gallons of VELTEX—THAT'S HER."

Fashion Notes

Handpainted Underwear. Paris.—Handpainted underwear, which began with satins, has spread today to glove silk. Elaborately decorated with lace, the lingerie is painted with festoons and wreaths of flowers or quaint Arabian and Assyrian patterns as beautiful as it is impractical.

Crystal as Embroidery. Paris.—Crystal is being used extensively today as an embroidery on evening cloaks. American beauty and Lanvin green are two shades upon which crystals show up marvellously well. The patterns for this embroidery appear to grow more and more intricate.

Living Mannikins in Windows. London.—People rushing to the Savoy and Claridges for tea, have paused Practical Suit. New York.—A delightful practical suit for town wear or for sports on exhibition here today is of knitted artificial silk which is inclined to hold its shape better than pure silk. The surprise jacquette is beige bordered with wool brown, while the skirt—for once, a skirt not plaited—is of plain beige.

One Luxor Fad Sticks. New York.—Though the first fine frenzy of Egyptian styles has worn off a little, there is one adaptation from Luxor which seems likely to stay today to be with us for sometime. This is the hat ornament in the shape of a big green scarab or of a miniature royal fan.

Rival of Nainsook. New York.—Cross bar veils today is a rival of nainsook for hot weather pajamas. One set of cross bar veils pajamas in heliotrope piped with buffstrip shows here has a dressing avenue to match. A more elegant in buffstrip and black is on each garment.

MT. JOSEPH LUMBER COMPANY IS FORMED

JOSEPH, June 2.—A deal was closed during the past week wherein the sawmill known as Mill No. 2 at Exton Bros. Lumber Co. has been transferred to a new company known as the Mt. Joseph Lumber Co. The mill and timber are located east of Joseph in the Divide country where for a number of years Dawson Bros. have operated a sawmill. D. D. Hall of Portland is manager of the new company. Mr. Hall is a practical sawmill man, having operated mills in Alabama and in Kentucky Falls section. He was recently employed as superintendent of a big fir mill on the coast, leaving that job when the I. W. W. strike interfered with the logging operations. Mr. Hall is in Portland he decided to engage in white pine manufacture if a suitable layout and location could be found.
