FAMOUS ROSARY SHOW IN "BELLA DONNA"
 Pola Negri Wears Historic Ornament in First American-Made Photoplay.

Carved with a dagger from black ebony and amber, a Mohammedan rosary of authentic origin and colorful history serves as an important ornament and "prop" in Pola Negri's first American made Paramount picture, "Bella Donna," which will be on view at the Arcade Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The rosary is the property of Dudley Stuart Corlett, an Egyptologist who served as technical director during the filming of this Paramount picture. Captain Corlett spent ten years in Egypt and the rosary was secured by him while in Soumailand. Representing native workmanship at its best, the rosary was the personal property of a retainer of the infamous "Mad Mullah" of the Abyssinian border. For his participation in one of the "Mad Mullah's" raids on residents of Soumailand, the owner was sentenced to death. On the eve of his execution he presented the rosary to his present owner.

Most Christian people regard the rosary as a distinctly Christian institution, but its origin dates back to the prayer beads of the early Hindu and Buddhist philosophies.

The Mohammedan rosary consists of ninety-nine beads each representing one of the ninety-nine attributes of God. The hundredth attribute of God is known only to the Imam of Constantinople, official head of the church, and is represented in the rosary by a bead of different color and size. The rosary worn by Pola Negri in "Bella Donna" consists of the usual number of beads cut by a dagger from ebony, leaving them faced like a diamond. The hundredth bead is huge amber, one of beautiful color and finish.

In Guida Bergere's adaptation of Robert Hitchens' story, the rosary plays an important part. Fitzmaurice directed this picture, and the cast includes Conway Tearle, Conrad Nagel, Lois Wilson, Claude King and Macey Harlam.

Will Rogers as Ichabod Crane Presents His Greatest Screen Impersonation.

The many admirers of Will Rogers found a treat in store for them when the Polites star and larri' expert was seen as the picturesque character of Ichabod Crane in "The Headless Horseman," or "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," a filmization of Washington Irving's most popular American classic.

Will Rogers, whose popularity extends from coast to coast is one of the best-liked and cleverest of comedians. In the role of Ichabod Crane, a character that has been studied and admired through the past generation, Mr. Rogers presents one of the most laughable characters of his film career. According to those who have already witnessed a pre-release showing of this production it is stated that his work will be an epoch in his career.

The producer combed the motion picture industry for a character that could portray authentically and properly the peculiar Ichabod Crane, and it was only after a diligent search Mr. Rogers was found and agreed to utilize his histrionic abilities in the presentation of this difficult character.

Ichabod Crane, the old schoolmaster of Sleepy Hollow whose superior learning made him the idol of girlish hearts and whose love for good food caused him to decide to fall in love with the wealthy and beautiful Katrina Van Tassel, is a character that is a ready-made hit for Will Rogers. It is understood that he not only looks the part but he is the part and in the words of a critic positively brings this time-honored schoolmaster of Sleepy Hollow back to life upon the screen. It is a bit of characterization that will live for many seasons upon the screen and for those who see this production the name of midnight prowling goblin who has Will Rogers and Ichabod Crane will live in their minds forever.

It is felt by the producers that the millions who have followed the out-of-the-ordinary courtship of Ichabod Crane in book form will relish the good humor with which Will Rogers brings to this little love affair, and to those who have gasped at the terrible
