CHIEF BIDS FAREWELL TO THE NORTHLAND

The residents further believe Mr. Harding's visit has served to enlighten the people of the states regarding Alaskan resources and to dispell the old ideas derived from the early designation of the territory as an "ice box."

The president, during the two weeks' stay, has visited 11 towns and several more little settlements, has made three trips into the interior and has sailed along more than a thousand miles of the territory's coast line.

Seattle Prepares To Welcome Harding Party. WASHINGTON—Seattle is ready to welcome President Harding Friday.

Reviewing the battle fleet, which will salute him with a mighty salvo, the president is due to leave his floating headquarters, the transport Henderson, at 10 o'clock in the morning. Eight hundred soldiers and 40 selected boy scouts will form a special guard of honor for the president, greeting him as he leaves the ship.

After heading a parade through the downtown district, the president will proceed in a round about way to Woodland park, one of the largest in the west, where he will address the pledge of allegiance to country and flag to the boys of the annual Elks' picnic. Fifty thousand boys are expected to attend. From Yakima, 150 boys are marching on foot over the mountains to Seattle, carrying their own food and camping equipment and led by a troop of boy scouts.

At 4 o'clock the president will deliver his Alaskan address in the immense stadium of the University of Washington. The "Americanus," a historical pageant, will be running evenings next week in the stadium and the president will have as a background scenes at Valley Forge in the bitter days of the revolution.

ties and commodities have been the feature of the past week in business and finance. In some cases, such as copper, this was attributed to the immminence of new buying movements; in others it was considered to be the strong situation which normally develops after half year settlements have been made and July 1 dividends and interest payments have been distributed. There was also a disposition to emphasize the disregard by the markets of what might be considered bad news, this being taken as an indication of the material strengthening of the prospective position which was brought about by the liquidation of the late spring.

Wheat Decline Checked. One of the encouraging events of the week was the check imposed on the decline in wheat prices. After the leading futures had declined to the vicinity of 96 cents a bushel, a sudden rebound carried them back up to about the dollar level. Another factor, which contributed to the more cheerful feeling which was in evidence, was greater optimism over the progress of the reparations negotiations. Cables from abroad brought rumors of Germany's desire to effect a settlement and her willingness to abandon her stand on passive resistance in the Ruhr. In addition, it was reported that the French attitude toward the impending British note would not be as uncompromising as had been reported earlier. This revived hopes that the British reply to Germany might furnish the basis for an early settlement.

In well informed quarters there was a disposition to give much weight to the latest efforts to reach a settlement and to point out the promises which had been and is being made. It was also suggested that the negotiations are likely to cover a period of weeks and months rather than days and weeks.
