Female Boxer Weighing 110 Pounds Offers to Meet Any of Her Sex

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 4.—While champions and near-champions failing to obtain more than 50 per cent of the gate receipts, refuse to fight, a little 110-pound girl here is willing to meet any female boxer her weight and fight for nothing.

Miss Virginia Harris is the name of the young boxer, and just to show that she's willing to take on all comers, she starts off by challenging Jeannette De Mar, claimant of the world's lightweight championship for her sex.

The challenger doesn't look much like a boxer—when she is outside the ring. Only 17, she is outspoken and retiring, moving about with a deceiving elowness when she is dressed in her street clothes. But once she gets into the ring with her father, Harry Harris, formerly a professional boxer, the languid air vanishes and Virginia strikes a mean left and an equally effective right.

"Dad began to teach me how to box when I was a little girl," she explains. "I'm not looking for the championship particularly, but if I win I'll defend my title. Boxing appeals to me most, although I like all sports."

Virginia, by the way, is a speedy baseball player, an expert swimmer and holder of several trophies for high and fancy diving.

After admitting in her soft voice that she'd like a match out of Bridgeport, "because the girls here won't fight with me," Virginia made a statement which would cause a professional boxer to tear his hair in despair.

"I'm not in the ring for money—just for the love of it. I don't want any allowance for training expenses. I'll pay my own fare to New York to fight the championship claimant. The purse, or the lack of one, makes no difference to me."

After which Virginia turned her attention to her punching bag, as if fighting championship battles without hope of banking gate receipts was the most usual thing in the world.

Provo Tennis Star Wins.
SALT LAKE, Aug. 6.—Fred Dixon, 19 years old, tennis star of Provo, Utah, who annexed the state singles championship two weeks ago, Sunday added to his laurel, winning the intermountain championship by defeating the veteran Edward W. Garnett of Salt Lake.

The score was 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3. Although Dixon was hard pressed throughout by his opponent, Dixon's superiority was evident from the outset of the match.

Garnett had trouble getting his ball over the net on his service.

Monday Dixon paired with John Smith, will meet Wesley Howell and Cyril Hammond in the finals of the double championships.

These red shoes were to be expected. We knew all the time that if America fell for red propaganda she would put her foot in it.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy, and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

MEMOIRS

Memoirs—by C. D. Huffman

Joseph Anson

Joseph Anson was born in Staffordshire, England, August 15, 1837. At the age of 10 years, with his parents, he crossed the deep, and settled at Baltimore, Maryland. They lived in New Jersey, Ohio and Iowa, where Joe attended school at intervals until he gained a good education.

At the beginning of the war he was among the first to offer his services. He enlisted in company E, 5th Iowa infantry. For a time he was under General Pope and he did service at the siege of Corinth; he was in the battle of Iuka, then went to Shiloh's camp, fought in the battle of Mississippi River and was in the Atlanta campaign. He was transferred to the 5th Iowa cavalry and sent to Louisville to recruit. Following this he was in Tennessee in the campaign under General Wilson, known as Wilson's Cavalry. After the war he served until the close of the war, being mustered out with an honorable and excellent record. He returned to Iowa whence he now came to Union County, Oregon, making the entire trip by ox team. He had a brother in this county who made the trip in 1852.

He at once took a homestead and began general farming and stock raising. He added 30 acres to his home place and in 1872 turned his attention mainly to stock. In October, 1865, he married Miss Amelia, daughter of John Newell and to them have been born five children as follows: Minnie, living in California; S. W., deceased; Nellie, living in California; J. Orin, living with his family on the old home place; James, living at Telocast in this county. This family have proved to be some of our very best citizens.

In 1872 Mrs. Anson passed away. In March, 1909, Mr. Anson contracted a second marriage, the lady of his choice being Annie G. Sparks of Pendleton. After some years separated and Mr. Anson now lives on his farm with his son J. Orin and family.

Never despair, girls. Lady Louise Mountbatten, cousin of George V, is engaged at the age of 43.

Speaking of inconsistency, "which is one of your prettiest themes," writes "Hotel Clerk," this morning, "the man with whom I slept in a piano box the night before the Indianapolis race, just kicked about his $7.50 room at this hotel."

Speaking Directly Into The Transmitter

Clearness and distinctness of speech is of course the foundation of a satisfactory telephone conversation.

The transmitter of the telephone is of delicate adjustment and its fullest effectiveness can only be obtained through proper use.

The lips should not be more than an inch from the transmitter, and the voice should be clear, not loud.

Speak directly and distinctly into the mouthpiece. This will mean your satisfaction and that of the person with whom you are talking.

No More Dickering

THE possessor of the loudest voice or the most brazen cheek used to be able to drive the best bargain. But, dickering, chaffering and haggling over prices have gone out of date.

Simply by glancing over the advertisements in your paper you can see where to go for the best buys. You can compare values and check up prices without even stirring from your easy chair. You can know in advance just what you are going to get and how much it will cost. And you can have the satisfaction that comes from knowing your money is wisely spent.

Nowadays, every one is given an equal opportunity to buy shrewdly. But there are still a rare few who fail to utilize the advertisements. Don't be one of them.

Every advertisement is a real opportunity.
