NEW BLASTING POWER FOUND IN OXYGEN

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The use of liquid oxygen as an excellent and cheap explosive in salt, metal and other non-gaseous mines and in quarry and other outside blasting, is recommended by the United States Bureau of Mines after a series of tests. Preliminary experiments in this novel explosive, conducted at Pittsburgh, indicate that it may be used to advantage where dusts and gases are not present, but is especially useful elsewhere in lessening the cost of blasting.

While liquid oxygen has not been used in this country so far for this purpose, it is already widely used in Mexican mines; has been employed in large quantities in the Upper Silesian mines of Germany since the war, and has been adapted to tunnel work, iron mining, subway and canal work in cities in that country. It was used not only in Germany but in the French iron mines of Lorraine after the German seizure, and applied by them also to the destruction of French steel plants. French officials of the Lorraine district believe the explosive has come to stay, and the bureau is conducting negotiations with Alaskan companies for its adoption there.

An advantage is that it can be prepared on the job at low cost after the erection of compressing plants, which will make it of especial value in Alaska. As liquid oxygen can be made at the place of consumption, dangers common to transportation of other explosives can be done away with. Low production cost, lessening the cost per unit of material blasted, is another advantage.

In the use of liquid oxygen explosives there is practically no danger of premature ignition, it was found. The danger of misfires, too, is eliminated by a wait of 30 or 40 minutes after the fuse is lighted, when practically all of the oxygen will have evaporated. Another advantage is the elimination of the danger of unexploded sticks in shoveling and subsequent handling of coal or ore going out of the mine. Other sources of danger avoided are the handling and thawing processes, such as are necessary with frozen dynamite, and the hazard from lightning or fire when stored.

But there are certain disadvantages in the use of this explosive, the bureau says. Because of its rapid evaporation liquid oxygen must be used quickly and within a definite time after the hole is charged, thus limiting the number of holes that can be fired simultaneously, although in Germany as many as 28 have been fired at once. Its use virtually requires the installation of a liquidating plant at considerable first cost, and this plant must be kept running regularly to obtain low cost explosive, as the main cost is in the power used.

That the power of liquid oxygen as an explosive is favorably comparable with other explosives is shown in the fact that 5,300,000 pounds of liquid oxygen are equal to 8,000,000 pounds of dynamite.

One of the interesting features of the high development of this explosive in Germany has been the designing of small portable liquid oxygen making plants to produce three liters an hour. Such plants have been constructed to move about on trucks, making the material much more available for small operations.

LUTHERANS OF WORLD TO MEET

Delegates Representing 90 Million Lutherans to Gather at Eisenach, Germany.

For the first time since the days of the Reformation in the sixteenth century are the different sections of the Lutheran Church meeting in Convention, states Reverend Bogstad, pastor of the Zion Lutheran church of La Grande.

About two hundred delegates are gathering in the town of Eisenach, Germany on August 19, 1923 to deliberate on religious and ecclesiastical affairs.

Nearly ninety million, or one-fifth, of the Christians in the world are Luthernans. They get their name from Martin Luther, a monk, who in 1517 inaugurated the Reformation when he nailed his 95 Theses to the door of the Wittenburg church. His views of church and state and his interpretation of the Bible and Christianity excited interest and spread rapidly over all Europe and produced "Protestantism" and the "Evangelical" movement.

This movement was definitely defined at a great Council that met at Augsburg in 1530. The statement of principles then and there read before Emperor Charles V. is known as the Augsburg Confession which together with Luther's Catechism constitutes the Confession of the Lutheran Church.

Through four hundred years the Lutheran Church has been strong in twenty countries. It is a church of many languages and yet there is a Lutheran World Unity. This unity is one of confession, of doctrine, rather than of polity or organization. The place of meeting for this world convention is Eisenach, Germany. The spot is historic. It is a fitting place for such a gathering. The great Reformer passed his school days there. The visitors will follow in his footsteps as they walk through his narrow streets and in the old castle, Wartburg, that towers above the city.

In this castle Luther was kept captive for months, four hundred years ago; but he used his time well in translating the New Testament into the language of his people.

There he also wrote the words and composed the music of the Lutheran Battle Hymn: "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God." This hymn will no doubt be sung in several different languages at the same time. The closing services of the convention will be held at Wartburg. The program calls for six days meeting. There are three subjects for discussion:

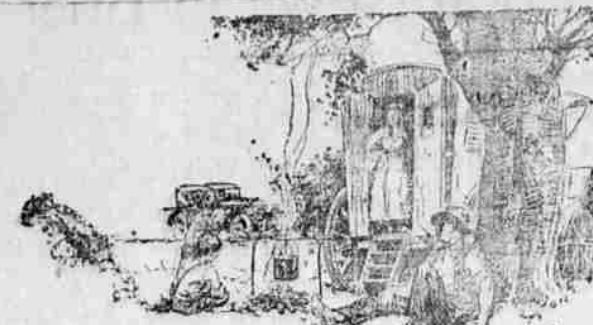

I. The Universal Character of the Lutheran Church.

II. The Confessions as the Indispensable Foundation of the Lutheran Church.

III. What Can Be Done Toward Christian Unity?

Plans have been made with the American Press to report the convention August 19, has been designated as the "World Convention Sunday." In tens of thousands of churches the day will be observed by special prayers and addresses. In La Grande and Union County the Lutheran World Convention will be observed with a Lutheran Rally at the Riverside Park. The services will be conducted at 11 a. m. by the Zion English Lutheran Church. A cordial invitation is extended to all Lutherans in the County to attend. Each family is requested to bring their own lunch. The afternoon will be spent in a social time.

Of Carved Lava. NEW YORK.—Whether or not the recent volcanic outbreaks in Italy have had anything to do with it, the fact remains that bracelets and necklaces of carved lava are shown in some of the avenue shops today. The lava, carved in quaint patterns, is in shades ranging from putty to terra cotta.

GYPSY BLOOD -gratified!

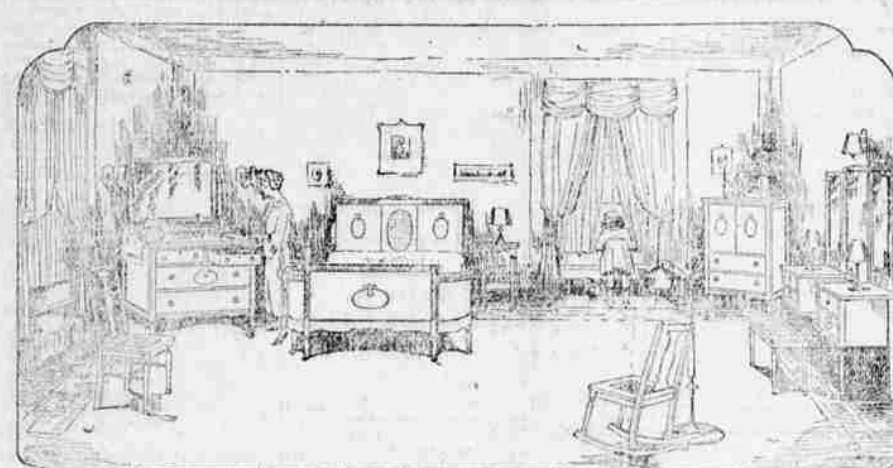

You needn't be "raggle-taggle gypsies" to think of life being under open skies, beside a brook with the scent of mountain-pine all about. Better still pack off in your motor—have the summer of your life—traveling comfortably and enjoyably—with the needful "Red Crown" in your tank. If you have gypsy blood, gratify it! And remember—for long, economical mileage, and for powerful work in the mountains and elsewhere—it's "Red Crown" for the experienced motorist.
