CLEAN SPORT INFLUENCES BOYS IN U.S.

"Trifling With Honor" at Star Theatre Shows Power of Heroes Over Youth.

That the influence of sports on the American youth, at today's very great is graphically brought out in "Trifling With Honor," the Universal-Jewel photoplay now showing at the Star Theatre.

The introduction of almost every branch of athletics in the public schools has augmented this influence to a marked degree. Athletics have a prominence in the life of every normal youth that can hardly be over-emphasized. Every youth has his favorite game and his heroes are the lads who excel in that sport.

Jimmy Hunt, the messenger boy in "Trifling With Honor," was a baseball fan. He never missed a game in his home town, and he practiced swinging a bat so much around the house that he broke all of the electrical fixtures. And he adored Bat Shugrue, the home run king of the Pacific Coast League. Bat was his idol. He stood ready to fight any youth who proclaimed that any player was better than Bat and he read the sport pages every day for news of his hero.

When he read a series of articles about Bat's life, written under Bat's own signature, he devoured every line of copy and believed it. The stories were evolved in the imaginative brain of a sports writer, but they pictured the great Bat as the ideal type of manhood, grown out of a boyhood unimpeachable. And Jimmy, who was as tough a youngster as ever lived a can on an old dog's tail, threw his cigarettes away, shifted a snoring type of jaw to normal and reformed—utterly.

After Jimmy reformed he set forth to make the personal acquaintance of his hero and the meeting, under most dramatic circumstances, leads to the reformation of "Bat." Throughout Director Pollard has handled the story with the artistic and dramatic finesse that makes all of his productions stand forth as masterpieces of the cinema art.

It is a picture of intense human interest and appeal and its characters are portrayed by an all-star cast, including Rockcliffe Fellowes, Buddy Messinger, Fritz Ridgeway and Hayden Stevenson.

clat train over 20 miles of new track from Montreal to Mattawa. From Mattawa the company, under the direction of Henry Kolker, made its way by dog trail to camp Tem-Kip.

A flat-car loaded with wind machines and technical equipment for the filming of these difficult scenes was taken north from the company's Long Island studio. In addition to Miss Brady, the star, and Mr. Kolker, the director, Sonya Levien, co-author and adapter of the story; Maurice H. Flynn, Mario Majumdar, Nick Thompson, Jack Huston, Stephen Gratton, W. M. Cavanaugh, Margaret Morgan, Ned Hay, assistant director, George Weber, cameraman, and a staff of technical men made the trip.

Comedy showing, "Dumb Waiters."

Lean Youth and a Long Life

Nashville Tennessean—People who are under weight until they are 30, the doctors are telling us now, have more than a fair assurance of long life and are therefore, supposedly the objects of felicitation and much envy. The doctors do not explain, however, just why this prospect of long life is a thing so greatly to be desired. Years that are merely long have a way of bringing all sorts of things that nobody wants. There is always the chance of their being sorrowful, or unhappy, or tragic, or even drab and dull and wearying. The shorter the years, the better we say, unless there is something in them.

A full life is the sort to have, it only the thing that fills it be worth having. For those who are pious, only years enough for the uplifted heart and the good deed; for the wicked, time it may be to repent; for the sociable, many meetings; for the staid and sober, a safe abode; for the dreamer, more dreams; for the dapper (happiest of all), we ask the right to moon and pouter about with no timekeeper to mark up the wasted hours; for none of these—for nobody—mere length of years.

Conceals News or Escape.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., Aug. 17.

Believing that a policy of silence would give the authorities a better opportunity to apprehend Harold C. Williams' escape from the county jail, Sheriff Charles J. Springer did not release the news of his break until Tuesday night. The result? Harold is still at large. He was being held at the county jail pending trial on a charge of stealing an automobile belonging to John Y. Richardson, Portland accountant. He made his escape on August 7.
