MORMON BASIN ORE VALUABLE

BAKER, Aug. 22.—A report deemed reliable comes from the old mining camp of Mormon Basin that important ore development has been made on the Phelan group of mines in a cross-cut tunnel upon which work has been prosecuted for the past year or more.

A ledge carrying very high grade gold values was cross-cut and has been the cause of great jubilation on the part of the owners of the property and claim owners generally in the camp. This strike occurring as it has almost simultaneously with the rich finds at Malheur and Willow creek gives inspiration to the thought that the old neighboring mining camps are in for a genuine boom.

The Phelan property is situated on what is known as Sunday Hill, and is in close proximity to the Rainbow and Blue Mud mines. Associated with Mr. Phelan in the ownership of his property are one or more La Grande people, who also own the Monaghan group of claims, extensions of the well known Rainmow mine.

On the Phelan mine a ten-stamp mill has been built and just completed and if reports are true will soon begin dropping stamps on the ore from the new strike.

Clubs Receiving Charters.

CORVALLIS, Aug. 22. —Boy's and girls' clubs over the state are receiving their charters issued from the United States department of agriculture and mailed to them by H. C. Seymour, state club leader. The requirements for a charter are a membership of five or more, an adult leader, committees, and a program of work for the entire year submitted to the committee of the state leader. Each charter is signed by the secretary of agriculture, the state superintendent of schools, the director of extension service and the state club leader.

Cat Fancier Evicted
(By I. N. S.)

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Miss Laura Ashton was evicted from her rooms in Marylebone on grounds that she keeps seven cats, which periodically have families of kittens.

CONTINENTAL FLIGHTS ARE NEARLY OVER

lap of the night flight.

CHICAGO, (By the Associated Press)—Guided by powerful beacon lights, two government mail planes rushed toward each other through the night over the states of the middle west Tuesday night. Somewhere in Nebraska they were scheduled to pass.

One of them carried mail that left the Golden Gate Tuesday morning, the other sped westward with mail that left New York a few hours later, and the flight marked the inauguration of trials in the proposed 30-hour transcontinental air mail service.

If all goes well, the eastbound plane will wing its way to earth at New York Wednesday afternoon, while the westbound ship will drop with its burden of mail at San Francisco.

The westbound plane entered the area of night travel between Chicago and Cheyenne when it hopped off here at 6:55 p. m., central standard time, piloted by Dean Smith. Its companion, winging its way eastward, flew up to meet the night plane from Cheyenne.

Day Flight Uneventful.

The day travel of the two planes or in reality several planes, for planes and drivers were frequently changed, was little more eventful than the day mail flying that has long been in progress. The night flying between Chicago and Cheyenne, however, marked an innovation in the plan for continuance of air mail service between San Francisco and New York.

The planes Tuesday night are following at what at their height seems a lighted pathway over the 885 miles of night flying of the 2653-mile journey across the continent.

Their path is marked by a series of remarkable lights of great intensity and candlepower, and visible from three to 150 miles. Small beacon lights are only three miles apart, and at a distance of 25 miles are great searchlights, while the landing fields along the pathway of the speeding planes are also brilliantly lighted, and with emergency searchlights for use in case of forced landings.

Pilot C. Eugene Johnson was ill when he reached Cleveland from New York on the first leg of the east-to-west flight. He was indisposed when he left New York, but it was necessary to help him from the plane at Cleveland.

Start From Both Ends.

Pilot Obey M. Winslow started the [illegible] from the Golden Gate at 5:30 Pacific cost time, with 64 pounds of mail, while Pilot Johnson left New York at 12:01, eastern standard time, with 84 pounds of mail.

Pilot Johnson landed at Cleveland at 4:14, and Pilot Art Smith left the Ohio city at 4:15 p. m., 15 minutes behind schedule. He reached Chicago at 5:45 p. m., mountain time, and nine minutes later Pilot Robert Ellis hopped off for Rock Springs, Wyo., which was reached at 8 o'clock and Pilot Collison hurried away two minutes later for Cheyenne, but was forced to turn back to Larmie because he was almost out of gasoline. He was nearly exhausted and suffering from cold when he came down.

Powerful Lights Show Way to Night Flying Machines.

OMAHA, Neb., (By the Associated Press) Aug 22.—As dusk covered the 885-mile stretch between Chicago and Cheyenne Tuesday night, illuminating of the first night airway in the history of world aviation was begun.

At each of the United States air mail fields in Chicago, Iowa City, Omaha, North Platte and Cheyenne, 36-inch electric are beacons revolved completely around the horizon three times a minute, casting a 450,000,000 candle power beam 150 miles into darkness.

Another light of equal power flooded the runways of the field, in the center of which, flush with the surface of the ground, but protected by an iron grill, was a piercing cluster of red lamps. Upon the roof of the hangar, so lighted as to be visible a thousand feet or more, floated the fabric cone which to the pilot is a key alike to the direction of the wind and its velocity. Other buildings, radio towers and the boundaries of the entire reservation were outlined from cables carried underground.

At 25 points along the 885-mile way are emergency fields ranging from 15 to 30 miles apart, and from each of these points an 18-inch incandescent electric beacon, mounted on a 50-foot tower, casts a 5,000,000 candle power beam completely around the horizon every 10 seconds. In between these fields at three-mile distances acetylene gas beacons of 500 candle power flashed 150 times a minute. Into this path of light, following for the most part a straight air line from the great lakes to the Rocky mountains, the first planes of the proposed unique experiment flew at dusk, and from it they were scheduled to emerge at dawn.

Fog Blocks Collison: Cheyenne Pilot Starts.

OMAHA, Neb. Aug. 22, (AP)—At 10 o'clock Tuesday night Col. Paul Henderson, second assistant postmaster general, who is directing the flight made the following announcement regarding the delay to the eastbound mail plane piloted by Aviator Collison, who has on account of dense fog, returned four times to Laramie, Wyo.

"Collison, carrying the eastbound mail from San Francisco, was forced down at 5 p. m., at Larmie, 40 miles west of Cheyenne, due to a heavy fog. He made four attempts to get through to Cheyene, but the fog was so dense that at 9:15 he had not yet succeeded in penetrating it."

At 9:15 p. m., Colonel Henderson stated, Superintendent Egge of the local station called Cheyenne by long distance telephone, and ordered Pilot Yager to take off at once with the local Cheyenne mail for Omaha. Yager left a few moments after receiving the instructions, in eastward flight for Omaha.

At the same time Pilot Allison was ordered to have his airplane in readiness to pick up the San Francisco mail from Pilot Collison the minute he was able to penetrate the fog and reach Cheyenne.

Collison Forced Back.

LARMIE, Wyo. Aug. 22.—(AP)—Air Mail Pilot H. A. Collison returned to Laramie a second time at 8:45 p. m., mountain time, after running into low clouds and fog east of here that made it impossible to reach Cheyenne.

Collison said that after encountering heavy clouds and fog he discovered he was again short of gasoline. Helpers at the aviation field were rushed after a new supply of fuel.

"I'll make Cheyenne if its the last thing I ever do," Collison said, after landing.

MEREDITH WILL FILE SUIT SOON

Doesn't Want Money; He Wants Brookhart Under Oath; Senator to Reply Thursday.

DES MOINES, Ia., (By the Associated Press.)—Former Secretary of Agriculture E. T. Meredith's suit for libel and damages for 50 cents against Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, will be filed soon after Mr. Meredith's return at the end of this week from Bemidji, Minn., where he is vacationing, it was announced Tuesday night. Attorneys for Mr. Meredith already have been instructed in preparing the petition. Just where the suit will be filed has not been definitely determined.

Friends of Mr. Meredith, it is reported, have urged him to bring suit for a less unusual amount, but the former cabinet officer argues that he is not after Senator Brookhart's money.

Wants Brookhart Under Oath.

In his statement of Monday Mr. Meredith said "his real compensation will be in getting Mr. Brookhart on record under oath."

Mr. Meredith is to sue the Iowa senator because of the latter's alleged charges in a speech last week that Mr. Meredith, while secretary of agriculture, "sat in the Wall street game and helped to produce the greatest panic in farm prices in the history of agriculture."

"They have been engaged in a public controversy for several weeks over the financial condition of the American farmer. Mr. Meredith, in his statements, declared the farmers would receive $500,000,000 more for their grain this year than they did last year, and the senator, in his speeches, argued that the farmers are near bankruptcy becuse of economic conditions.

Senator Brookhart is expected to reply at length to Mr. Meredith's threatened suit in his Jewell, Ia., speech Thursday. He was engaged at his home in Washington, Ia., Tuesday in preparing this speech. The senator has said that he is not worried about the suit.

Dean Smith, left Chicago six minutes later, four minutes ahead of the scheduled time for departure.

Pilot Winslow, hurrying east, was relieved at Reno, Nev., by Pilot Blanchfield, who left there at 7:50 a. m., 25 minutes ahead of schedule. Pilot Scott took the eastbound ship from Elko, Nev., to Salt Lake, 620 miles from San Francisco, arriving there at 1:18 p. m., mountain time, and nine minutes later Pilot Robert Ellis hopped off for Rock Springs, Wyo., which was reached at 3 o'clock and Pilot Collison hurried away two minutes later for Cheyenne, but was forced to turn back to Larmie because he was almost out of gasoline. He was nearly exhausted and suffering from cold when he came down.

PUBLIC'S FUEL NEEDS ASSURED

tations between the operators and their employes.

"The commission," he asserted, "is prepared for eventualities." Immediately upon receipt of information that the Atlantic City conference had broken up over the question of increased wages, Mr. Hammond went to the White House for a conference with the president.

Upon leaving the executive offices, he called an immediate meeting of the coal commission and after it had been in session less than an hour a recess was taken to enable Mr. Hammond and Commissioner Neil to confer further with President Coolidge.

The only public statement resulting from this second interview was the authorized announcement that regardless of the out-come of the anthracite controversy the fuel necessities of the public would be met.

Officials who have followed the anthracite crisis closely expressed the opinion Tuesday night that the president would not intervene until the operators and miners had been given an opportunity to come forward with a proposed which might serve as a compromise upon which negotiations could be resumed.

In the absence of any such move it was said, the president might confine himself to a publication of the findings of the coal commission as to responsibility for the deadlock in the belief that public opinion might prove effective in bringing about an adjustment and at the same time would use available government agencies for accelerating the production and distribution of bituminous coal and of oil as emergency substitute for anthracite.

Heretofore, one of the three Boylen boys, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Boylen, has been at the booth window, but none of them can serve this year. The price of tickets will be the same as in previous years.

RENTS HIGHER BUT GENERAL COSTS LOWER

Food Stays Up.

The same report shows that food costs have mounted 44.3 per cent throughout the nation since the pre-war figures were compiled by the department.

Clothing is 74.3 per cent higher today than in 1914.

Fuel and light have jumped 50.6 per cent.

Furniture heads the list increasing 122 per cent.

The national rent increase for the war and post-war period is 43.4 per cent, as compared with the same period last year and, with the exception of rents, which appear to continue skyrocketing, the decline, it is believed, is steady return to a normal condition of prices decreased from the average increase in parity.
