 BAKER.—Baker defeated Raines in the opening contest of 1923 intercollegiate football season on the local grounds yesterday afternoon by a score of 31 to 0. Although the playing of both teams was ragged at times it was evident that the local squad is fast getting into shape, both in its offensive and defensive play and will be a strong contender for Western Oregon honors.
 Osman and Shaver showed best for the locals while the line in places developed weakness at times, lack of speed and accuracy causing the difficulty. R. C. Fribble refereed the game while Freeman Lubbs acted as umpire and Mike Huff as head linesman.

GLANDS TO BE BEFORE ROME MEDICO MEET

Chicago Physician to Talk on Interstitial Operation at Coming Conclave.

By Kenneth Harris, International News Service Staff, Chicago Correspondent.

CHICAGO.—A conclave of prominent medical men and surgeons from virtually every nation in the world will continue until October 14, according to Dr. Max Thorek, prominent Chicago surgeon, who departed for the Italian capital recently. The meeting will be known as the International Congress of Physicians and Surgeons, and leading medical practitioners and instructors from England, France, Italy, Belgium, Japan, China, Greece, Mexico, South Africa and North and South America will attend.

Dr. Thorek will address the assembly October 3 and will devote himself to a discourse on gland transplantation—a topic which physicians assert is engrossing the attention of hundreds of thousands of persons at this time. His subject will be: "My Four Years' Experience in Gland Transplantation."

While Dr. Thorek refused to discuss what his operations will be in a month, it is generally believed he intends to prove or disprove the theory that humanity is benefited by interstitial glandular operations. The physician said his reluctance to discuss details relative to such operations was prompted by the others of his profession.

Dr. Thorek received an appointment as honorary president of the congress some time ago. He also has been invited to speak before the Royal Academy of Medicine and Surgery of Rome, and has made tentative arrangements to conduct clinics in several European cities while abroad.

VOLCANIC ASH IS FATAL TO ALASKAN REINDEER, CLAIM

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, (AP)—The government reindeer herd at Port Heiden, on Bristol Bay, has suffered recently because of volcanic ash from a peak to the westward which covered the herd range to a depth of about an inch and a half, according to views received here. The ash, stirred by the hooves of the reindeer, caused acute throat and lung trouble, and wore away the hair and skin from the lips, causing suffering and often death. All the herders suffered, and Fred H. Tall, government teacher, had a narrow escape from death. An attempt to move the herd across the Alaskan Peninsula finally was abandoned.

The reindeer herd placed by the government in the Broad Pass region last year has prospered remarkably. Eskimo and Indian herders have recently been engaged in earmarking the late crop of reindeer and in steepling carcasses preparatory to the fall roundup and count.

According to the herders, reindeer will soon be entering the herd as the reindeer season approaches. The reindeer and deer cross freely and there are a number of cross breeds in the Broad Pass herd. When the deer were being driven from the Good News Bay district, along the table lands of the Alaska Range, thousands of reindeer intruding in an opposite direction were shot. There was no attempt to strike into the mass and some of the deer were lost, although the reindeer dogs reclaimed many.

The government herd at Atlatk, on the south end of Kodiak Island, is reported to be thriving. The original herd was driven from Port Heiden to Chalky Bay, placed about the United States Coast Guard cutter Unalaga and landed at Atlatk in 1921. Range conditions there are said to be almost ideal.

Bishop Roasts Spooners In London Public Parks, But Lovers Win Support

(By Luther A. Huston)
 (U. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON.—Ten nights in Hyde Park might well be the title of the latest literary effort from the pen of the Bishop of London, who is chairman of the London Council for the Promotion of Public Morality.

And what a fine title row the bishop's composition has stirred up. Quoth the Bishop in a letter to the press dealing with the subject of "spooning" in London's open spaces.

"Ten nights' observation in Hyde Park disclosed 748 cases of impropriety, indecency or immorality. Ten nights' observation in five other parks disclosed 2,545 cases of complaint."

No sooner had the Bishop's letter appeared in print than a shower of strident dissent arose from the defenders of London's honor. "What does the Bishop mean by indecency and immorality?" queried an aroused public. "Where else can young lovers do their courting if not in the parks?" was another question hurled at the frank and observant ecclesiastic.

The charge that the Bishop's statements were exaggerated, however, predominated in the storm of criticism his charges aroused. Only a small minority agreed with the Bishop and very few would be found who were willing to express the view that the bishop "hadn't told half the story."

To get the picture clearly before the reader it must be explained that London's many large parks and public playgrounds have long been regarded as the "meeting place of the masses." Complaint authorities for years have berated young swains and their "sweethearts" to utilize secluded corners of the parks for purposes that in a less-tolerant age would have been restricted to the interior sofa. The Bishop now contends that these practices have gone beyond the bounds of public decency.

"The Bishop's letter," said George W. Johnson, chairman of the Association for Moral and Social Hygiene, "displays the usual exaggeration on the subject of behavior in the parks. Unfortunately the Bishop does not define his terms. What do his emissaries, whose report has been accepted, understand by impropriety, indecency or immorality? I very much doubt whether the enormous number of cases he quotes would be included under any of these headings by the average citizen. Have the inspectors, every time they have seen a courting couple kissing, noted the act under the heading of impropriety. We all admit that certain things are wrong with the parks as well as with the morals of the people, but I do not see how the charges of impropriety, indecency or immorality are to be proved."

"Where are young men and women to do their courting if not in the parks?" asked Miss Crystal MacMillan, a well-known English social authority. "The Bishop must remember that members of working-class families living in small houses, without gardens, have nowhere else to go. I have never gone out to look for cases of impropriety in the parks, and perhaps that is why I have noticed very few cases that give offense. But I may not have as good eyesight as some of the Bishop's inspectors."

To the Bishop's charges that the police were lax in their efforts to regulate the "snooping" evil, police officials reported that arrests were of no avail in view of the reluctance of magistrates to convict on police evidence and the difficulty of obtaining reliable unofficial witnesses.

Cicely Hamilton, a well-known writer, is inclined to agree with the Bishop. She contends that there are certain "zones" in the parks so popular with amorous couples that their recumbent forms "suggest a study for 'The Morning After the Battle.'"

"I counted five couples within the radius of what I have called the 'zone,'" she said. "One was embracing on chairs, or affectionately asleep and the other three sprawling and hugging. And I am bound to admit in each of the three hugging cases it was the young woman who was the active agent, the young man who accepted passively, if with seeming content, her enthusiastic clasplings and huggings. And that—in broad daylight—was the worst I saw in two hours around the park. An open and vulgar display of affection—nothing more."

Sir Lionel Farris, head of the Department of Works, which controls Hyde Park, complained the cause of the "love-makers." "Personally," he said, "I do not view with horror and alarm the spectacle of couples ensconced behind a bush. I am inclined to think the Bishop's inspectors went looking for trouble."

The Bishop, however, is standing by his guns and declares that "in broad daylight persons are to be seen openly misconducting themselves" and with a clerical gesture of horror and disgust, he remarked that "at dusk and after nightfall these evils are intensified to an extent that cannot be described in a newspaper."

At any rate, the Bishop's assertions have stirred up a tempest of public controversy. It is not on record as yet, however, that his pronouncements have decreased the popularity of the parks with the "men and the maids" of London.

You Need a Pilot

EVERY good ship, nearing port, takes on a pilot. Usually, the law requires it. The pilot knows the channel. With his capable hands at the helm, the vessel is safe. Without him there is danger of the shoals.

When you set sail on a shopping tour you, too, should have a pilot. Everybody needs one. And well-informed shoppers always have one—advertising.

Advertising keeps you off the rocks of extravagance and waste. It takes you straight into the port of economy. It tells you plainly where to go for what you want. It shows you how to save steps—and money—and time. By watching it carefully, each day, you are able to buy to the best advantage.

Often, the advertisements will keep you from making an unwise purchase by pointing out just why one article suits you better than another. It points out for you the pick of the country's market and the selection of the particular kind, shape, size and color that best suits your taste and fits your pocket-book.

Whether you want food, clothing, furniture or a toy for the children, the advertisements can help you.
