over pay, and just if he did rather than suffer the consequence of coming in contact with a deadly arrow.

It is claimed that following each of these incursions on purse and pet there would be an era of plenty in whatever district Robin Hood happened to be, because he would divide the spoils with the needy, his generosity and charity being without parallel. Naturally, he was much beloved by the poor and had as naturally he was feared and hated by those better blessed financially.

But his idea of making the fiddlers pay when they assembled around his festive boards was unique to say the least, and if it did lack in legality, it did not fail to do good in quarters most needing a little of the good of a scheme being carried.

As played by Douglas Fairbanks in his elaborate screen production "Robin Hood," this character compels unqualified admiration, his charmingly romantic penchant being especially stressed in this notable characterization, which bids fair to live in cinema history as one of the most conspicuous triumphs ever attained by any star in any historic effort.

"Why Girls Leave Home" To Be Shown at Star Theater Thursday and Friday

For the week after something different in the realm of the photoplay, the management of the Star Theater has something special to offer Thursday and Friday, when there will be presented for the first time in La Grande the thrilling heart-interest photodrama, "Why Girls Leave Home." Although the theme and title of the production are from the great American stage success of the same name which thrilled theatregoers a generation ago, the Wagner Brothers, who present the picture claim that there is not a bit of melodrama in the entire story. The prominent reviewer has stated that the production breaks into an "inland of 'Way Down East' and 'Humoresque,'" although the picture itself resembles neither of the two productions mentioned.

The scenario, theme, production and cast are all of the very best. Anna Q. Nilson has the stellar role and she is supported by Marjorie Powers, Corinne Barker, Don Mason, George Haney, Claude King, Katherine Perry and others of note.

The story deals with every name in general but for the sake of clarity presents two specific instances. One, the home of a rich merchant who indulges his daughter's every whim. The other, the home of the rich man's employee, who represses in his daughter every youthful instinct. The result is that both girls leave home and attempt to fight the battle of life alone. Later their paths cross and together they work out their own destiny in a manner which is at one time of compelling interest and at the same time true to life.

La Grande Meets Milton Football Team Friday

(By Scoop)
La Grande's high school football team, conquerors of the strong Union aggregation 46 to 9 will face their second severe test of the 1923 season Friday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock on the high school field when Milton-Provost's McLaughlin Union high school team line up against the local lads.

Milton will come to La Grande with a strong team, nearly the same according to reports, as their last year eleven, which beat Ashcroft in an over-detailed Pontiac who won from La Grande 17 to 10 eight or two touchdowns.

Facing them, Coach MacTavish's protegee, strengthened by a week of practice after practice during the week ended a 26-0 cleanup in time. It is true that the Blue and White squad is not as strong as last year's, but undoubtedly he triumphed Friday than they ever lost Saturday. MacTavish has developed a team practically built from last year's second team around the few better men left after graduation look to foil that has plenty of fighting spirit, is playing on its toes every instant and playing with a determination to win. Their spirit was exemplified last Saturday when they scored 24 points in the fourth quarter after going scoreless in the first and only making three touchdowns in the first half. Their fight brought them a much higher score than was anticipated in the Union game and is counted upon to defeat the Milton team.

Need More Support.

One thing is certain, the Blue and White team is not getting the support from the citizens of the city in general that they should be getting. The crowd last Saturday, while large, was only about half what it should be and those present were disappointed with the idea that they should crowd onto the field every time they got a chance so that they could see the game better. In more than one case, the crowd falling to stay behind the sidelines, caused the offensive team to be handicapped in execution of their attack. If such a profitable condition and should not be permitted to occur again.

Get Behind the Eleven.

In a nutshell, the way it stands at present, the team has fair chance of coping the pennant if they are given the whole-hearted support of the city. Their chance isn't heavy in their favor but it's a fighting chance and it's a surety that with several hundred, possibly a thousand, spectators behind them every time they go on, the team would be heartened to perform even better than they have already.
