Famous French Recipes

Pumpkin Soup.

Paris. (U.N.S.)—Pumpkin soup is a favorite dish in the land where the joys of pumpkin pie are unknown.

Peel the hard rind from two large slices of pumpkin and cut into small square pieces. Put into a pan with two glasses of water and a little salt. Let cook for one hour over a moderate fire and then pass through a sieve. Add a quart of boiled milk, a piece of butter the size of an egg, salt or sugar if desired. Cook for few minutes, stirring from time to time. Pour over the slices of bread or crisp croutons.

MILADY TAKING LEMONS BY TON

LOS ANGELES. (U.N.S.)—Beauty parlors in Los Angeles and possibly in other parts of the United States are said to be absorbing that portion of the Southern California lemon crop which, before prohibition, went into saloons.

It is estimated that the 450 beauty parlors in this city use 1,000,000 lemons, or about eight and a half carloads, every year.

GENEVA—The Alps take a steady toll of human life. Every summer sees a number of tragic fatalities. Many bodies never recovered, for the devoted mountain climber often goes out alone to find his last resting place deep in an ice crevasse or at the remote base of a precipice. Accidents have been unusually numerous this year.

Recently when a Swiss bank clerk named Gschub, noted as a good climber, failed to return, searchers saw his body at the foot of a cliff. A rescue party, led by a priest with 450 feet of rope, finally made the descent after 12 hours of dangerous work. They found beside the body a note saying: "Kindly bury me here."

The little funeral party rolled boulders and blocks of ice so as to form a mound over the slain, the placed an axe at his head as a cross, and the priest read the burial service.

Women Adopt the Colorful Knitted Tie from the Masculine Fashion

With the tremendous growth of the vogue for knitted outerwear this fall, the knitted tie has found its place in the feminine mode, and is now being adapted to the blouse worn with the knitted jacket and the figured silk blouse worn so gracefully beneath the strappings of the new peasant frocks.

Perhaps the most significant feature of this new boyish tuggery for women is the beautiful colorings. From Egypt have been borrowed subtle blendings of old red, gold, bronze and pottery blue, cleverly knitted into diagonally striped designs. There are new tones of blue and severely simple patterns almost classic in design.

The newest knitted ties have the popular open ends received so well by the masculine element. And the ties especially adapted to women's blouses are considerably shorter in length, despite the fact that they are purchased at the same counter where brother buys his.

A maroon tie of silk and cotton mixture is a combination which the dark-eyed girl should not overlook in selecting.

For the jagged collars of the figured silk peasant blouses now used with the cunning jumper frocks, designers are taking the knitted tie as a finishing touch. Where the blouse boasts an intricate design, the tie should be of a suitable plain color. Where the blouse is in a solid color, one may select the most intricate design for the tie. This rule should be followed in selecting the new knitted tie so as to avoid ineffective conglomeration of patterns.

Old gold flowers are knitted into a dark brown silk tie and worn with a blouse of faint yellow. The three shades of yellow lend a new costume note to what we once knew as the shirtwaist.

To brighten up your last season's topcoat, just add a bit of color at the neckline of your blouse. Tangerine diagonally striped with old blue, violet with a touch of green, biscuit with old gold and orange stripings or a neatly figured pattern knitted in two shades of your favorite color, will do wonders toward making a passé costume look quite new and up-to-date.

Rich Platinum Deposit Found Near Laramie, Wyo.

LARAMIE, Wyo. (U.N.S.)—Mining men here are agog over the recent discovery of platinum ore near Centennial in an ancient copper prospect at which Jacob Schnitzer, veteran prospector, has been scratching away for many years.

As platinum is worth $116 an ounce, the search for gold has well-nigh been forgotten by the lean and patient mountain men who have been searching for that metal since Laramie was a tent city on blighted plains.

There is much of romance in the reported discovery by Schnitzer. For more than thirty years he has been prospecting in the mountains behind Centennial and had great hopes of finding rich copper veins in a prospect overlooking the middle fork of the Little Laramie. It was with this hope that he sent a sample of ore to an assaying company at Denver, and it was with surprise in mind that the assayer made his tests.

Platinum, according to local mining men, is practically unknown outside of the Utah mountains in Russia, if the old Rambler mine near Encampment be excepted, so the Denver assayer was surprised when the first test showed a native platinum content of $12 to the ton. He immediately realized that much platinum must have been lost in the fire test—platinum occurring in combination with arsenic and a second test, by water, bore him out in this contention. The water test showed that the platinum content of a small sample would run $42 to the ton.

It is this that the mining men are buzzing about.

"It's the greatest find since gold was discovered in California," boasts platinum, the ore shows boronite, covellite and calcopite, all rich in copper, but the platinum is the big thing," say mining men here.

Centennial is in the foothills of the Medicine Bow range, thirty miles due west of Laramie. It is on the Colorado, Wyoming and Eastern Railroad, and about thirty-five years ago was a boom town for a short space, following the discovery of several rich pockets of pure gold. Since then prospectors have lived and died in these hills, hoping for another pocket or a rich vein.

The Rambler mine at Encampment, once famous for its copper output, and where small quantities of platinum are still mined although the amount to the ton is so small as scarcely to pay, is in the Saratoga Valley, directly across the mountain range and about thirty-five miles from Centennial.

SCIENCE SEEKS CLIFF SECRETS

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Scientists hope to learn more about the peoples of prehistoric times who occupied the cliff dwellings and who built fortified homes in the rocks of Beaver Creek, as a result of explorations now under way at the Montezuma Castle, near Camp Verde. It has been announced.

Under the direction of Frank Pinkley, who is in charge of the ruins of Casa Grande, Ariz., Montezuma's Castle, a puzzle to archaeologists, is being partially restored and one of its rooms heretofore closed to the public, on account of its dangerous condition is being explored.

Excavations in this room have revealed many articles which indicate that the early inhabitants were civilized. Mr. Pinkley has found pieces of woven cloth, black and dark red in color and a red sandal. A number of incense used to grind corn by the ancient peoples, have also been discovered, but these differ in no particular from others found in the Apache ruins throughout the state.
