Circumstantial Evidence.
 Bobby: Awfully sorry, but I must put some jam on your face, so as mother'll think you stole it. You see, you won't get licked for B and I would.

A young man writes to us, asking whether we would advise him to get married on $20 a week. Inasmuch as we have no special grudge against him, we would not.

Doctor— "Did that medicine straighten your husband out all right?"
 Wife— "Yes, we buried him yesterday."

The old-fashioned girl, says a La Grande who longed to become a missionary to brighten her life in foreign lands now has a daughter who frequently goes out and makes a lively competence teaching her slaves how to clean up the neighborhood women of auction bridge and mah jong.

THEATERS

"Mary of the Movies" Comes to the Star Theater Wednesday Only.

You wouldn't think that a choice between the girl you love and a Ford would be such a momentous one, would you? And you wouldn't think that the results of that decision would start the girl along to fame and make her a real star in the movies, would you?

But it did—and the other amazing things it started are to be seen at the Star theater Wednesday only when "Mary of the Movies," the big P. B. O. special production with its cast of forty big stars, is due.

The company of stars appearing in this picture is probably the most extraordinary ever assembled in one production, numbering as it does such big and popular favorites as Bryant Washburn, J. Warren Kerrigan, Stuart Holmes, Douglas MacLean,

In addition to that it brings to the patrons a real slice of Hollywood as it really is—shows just how the movies are made, what sort of people make them, how they live and, above all, the whole-hearted kindness of them.

All this is worked into a story that is gripping from beginning to end, because it tells what so many people want so much to know—what are the salacious going Hollywood's road to fame?

The tale centers around Mary Mack, of Burton, Arizona, who, urged by the necessity of securing funds to make possible an operation for her lame brother, goes to Hollywood to seek fame and fortune in motion pictures. There we follow her progress, make with her the pilgrimage of hopeful youth under the search of fame, and with her the agony and the triumph, the disappointment, the glory.

Through it all is woven the story of her love, of the faith of the folks "back home," of the reward, that faith received—a story that is human and real throughout.

To John McBurnett goes the distinction of having directed this unusual production, which was made under the personal supervision of Lou Lewyn in Hollywood, and which is being released by Film Booking Offices of America.

Supreme Love Story Pictured at Star—"Merry-Go-Round" Is Screen Classic.

Filmed at Universal City under the direction of Rupert Julian, who has made some of the outstanding Universal successes of past years, "Merry-Go-Round" embodies a number of high class elements in motion picture industry.

The story is simple and powerful, a love tale supported by episodes in the life of Austria before, during and after the war. Several men who had lived for years in the famous old world capital helped in securing evolution in the scenes of Vienna.

What the great world war meant to the love affair of a high-born count and a poor girl of the Prater is the "Coney Island of Vienna," so dramatically is "Merry-Go-Round," the multiple reel screen feature coming to the Star theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The cast includes Mary Philbin, Universal's big "find" of the year Norman Kerry, George Backthorne, Dale Fuller, Cesare Gravina, George Steinmann, Dorothy Wallace, Sidney Gray, Edith York, Lillian Sylvester, Al Edmundson, Maurice Talbot, Fehsich, Oliver and others of high professional standing—one of the big casts of the screen year.

The chief setting of the story is the Prater, where clown clothes hid selling hearts and smiles covered treachery. The people of the famous American carnival center, Coney Island, have proven interesting to many

Sherrys Showing "The Last Moment" Drama of Thrills Today and Tomorrow

"The Last Moment" is heralded as another one of those thrilling dramas of the sea, with a brutal captain, a storm, and a shipwrecked hero and heroine.

But J. Parker Read, Jr., who produced the play for Goldwyn production, has given the film a novel twist. The murderous captain is not a villain but the dilapidated young man who is ruthlessly plunged from a world of books into a horribly realistic situation.

"A Thing"—why describe it in advance, you have to see it to appreciate it and also the terror it inspired—some the "Bride" to perfection, via the side of the ship, and then has the hero and heroine to play with. And what a terrifying game of blind Man's Bluff they play in the darkened
