Mrs. Hill Speaks in Auditorium

Mrs. J. F. Hill, retired state president of the Parent-Teachers' association, gave a very interesting talk last evening at the high school auditorium, in connection with the Parent-Teachers' work and Education week. She stated that "the Parent-Teachers' association of the United States is the largest organization in the country concerning itself primarily with child welfare. The organization is founded upon the love of childhood and is for the purpose of supplementing and co-operating with the schools. It does not concern itself with principals of school administration, it regards school administrators and teachers as experts along these lines. She spoke of the influence of the parent on the child in the home and how vital it is for the child that he be given proper care and instruction in the home, and in school how vital it is that the parent be acquainted with the teacher and the teacher with the parent, so that by co-operating they may do their best for the child. Along this line she made a strong plea for proper support of the schools, financially and otherwise. She said that the school and the efficiency of the schools depends upon the character of the future citizenship of the country, and in her last plea she stated that the character of any community depends upon the citizenship of adults of that community, and asked that the parents and teachers co-operate with those of authority in the community to make the cleanest possible community. She urged that proper playground facilities be established, and also stated that the children learn in the street more than they learn in the home of school."

Mrs. Hill is a very talented woman and is one of the vice-presidents of the United States Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers' association

After Mrs. Hill's message to the people of La Grande, Mrs. Willard Bond, district vice-president of the state, spoke briefly of the plans made for the work of this district. Mrs. Bond is from Pendleton and is very interested in this work.

All La Grande knows it is a great privilege to have these two women here and realize what the Parent-Teachers' association means to the child welfare of La Grande and vicinity.

The chorus of the high school, under the direction of Miss Esabelle Miller, sang two beautiful selections from the opera, and received much applause.

THEATERS

"The Savage Woman" and "Poverty of Riches" On at Sherrys Today and Tomorrow.

Francis Curran's "The Savage Woman" ("La Fille Sauvage")—adapted for the screen by Kathryn Stuart, presented on the screen by Clara Kimball Young.

Renee (Clara Kimball Young), daughter of a derelict trader, now dead, is mistaken for a native prince for the reincarnated spirit of the queen who once dwelt within the ruined palace where he first catches sight of the girl. Frightened, she prevents her capture by flashing a mirror in his eyes and making her escape. She flees through the forest and is mistaken by another man, this time for an animal, and he fires at her, wounding her slightly as she turns again to flee. Lurier bathes the wound and commands the girl, whom he sees is afraid of him, to lead him out of the forest.

When Lurier returns to Paris, Renee goes with him, and is happy until she understands that a marriage ceremony is desirable and that Lurier is wearying of her and returning to his former love, Almee Ducharme. Almee has given him a curious stone for his collection; this Renee destroys in a fury and then returns to Abyssinia to find another to take its place.

Lurier also goes back to the spot where he found Renee, but this time captured by the fanatic prince who prepares to offer him as a sacrifice to the spirit of the queen. Renee appears just in time to save him, which she does without knowing what is happening.

There are so many fine things in the new Goldwyn picture, "Poverty of Riches," by Leroy Scott, that it is difficult to say what its strongest impression is. The story is one of family life, simply told, yet replete with drama, as real life is. The acting of the all-star cast leaves nothing to be desired; and the story shows actual progression in the unfolding of the characters of the people in the photograph. At the end of the story, life is taught, them something, and they are different people from the young married folks we met at the beginning of the first reel. It would be unfair to discuss the plot of the story, but it is gripping, entertaining and delightfully told.

Reginald Barker directed "Poverty of Riches," and injected many subtle bits of action that are rarely seen in photoplays. In the cast are Leatrice Joy, Irene Rich, Louise Lovely, Richard Dix, John Bowers, and half a dozen wonderful children.

Never in the history of the motion picture industry has a production been accorded such unmitigated praise as the hand of critics from coast to coast was "Merry-Go-Round," the "Universal-Super-Jewel," which is booked for the Star theatre today, Friday and Saturday. Especially interesting was the approval of the principals and featured members of the cast and of the directorship. It proved a revelation alike to the industry and to the theatre-goers. Some of the unusual points in connection with this picture are:

The discovery of a new star—Mary Philbin, who only a few short years ago was a Chicago high school girl. Some one entered her in a beauty contest run by the Hearst newspapers, and when it was over she was found to be second choice. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, saw her photograph and arranged a screen test, which she passed satisfactorily. The dainty little miss was then started on a severe course of training in small parts, gradually increasing in importance until finally she was deemed ready for starring honors.

She began work in the "Merry-Go-Round" with the best wishes and confidence of the entire studios, but even her most sanguine admirers were unprepared for the exceptional portrayal she gives in the pathetic role of a little organ grinder on the Prater, the Congo Island of Vienna.

In selecting the artists the casting director spent many weeks in going over lists of available players in order to get just that were true to life. For the principal male role, that of an Austrian army officer, the part of the nobility, Norman Kerry was selected. He brings to the part the yain and topknot soldier all of the consummate ability that has made his portrayals of other parts stand forth as masterpieces of acting. Cesare Gravina, George Seligmann, George Backstrom, Dale Fuller, Anita Vavrika, Maude George, Dorothy Wallace are among other well-known players in featured roles.

Nine months were required for the building of the sets, rehearsals and actual shooting, and more than one thousand extras were engaged during the greater part of that period. In order that each detail of the picture would be absolutely true to life as it was lived in Vienna during the festive days just preceding the world war, Director Rupert Julian sent a staff of specialists to that city to take photographs and obtain data on the city shown in the film. The most noteworthy get in the picture, and one of the greatest pieces of engineering work ever done in connection with the production of the picture, was the reproduction at Universal City of the film capitol had, who had visited the original, stated that they easily could imagine they were in Vienna once more.

Another unusual happening was the importation of the solid-tempered carriage and harness formerly used by King Charles of Austria, and also of the army officers' uniforms. In order to obtain these it was necessary for Universal to file a bond with the Austrian government and also take out life insurance policy from Lloyds at London.

FORD TRUCKS TO PLAY AN IMPORTANT ROLE

DETROIT, Mich. (Special)—Ford trucks will play an important part in the reconstruction of the devastated sections of Japan and in furnishing transportation for the thousands of inhabitants in the affected regions.

This is indicated by orders coming into the Ford Motor Company.

The first of these was from the city of Tokio and called for 1,000 Ford one-ton truck chassis.

The entire transportation system of Japan's capitol city was destroyed by the earthquake and fire which followed, leaving the city helpless. In a move toward quick recovery the municipality ordered 1,000 Ford trucks and within a short time will have a great fleet of motor buses in operation.

The Tokio order, placed with Sale & Frazer, Ltd., Ford distributors for Japan, was received October 10th. Shipments, made from New York, began at once and the final consignment went out last Wednesday, October 31.

Monthly truck orders from Japan, running usually between 400 and 500 continue to come in, further indicating the demand for the Ford truck.

The Ford assembly plant, parts stock and show rooms at Yokohama were completely destroyed by the earthquake and headquarters in Tokio was damaged to a considerable extent.

Drug Trade Will Flourish Until Production Ceases

BERLIN, (AP)—The trade in baneful narcotics can be controlled only through limiting the production of the raw drugs, in the opinion of Representative Stephen G. Porter, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who was the American delegate to the League of Nations Narcotic Commission last summer. Mr. Porter passed through Berlin recently on his way from Geneva to Washington. All men who have studied the opium question, he says, realize control must be at the source of production, for no nation can protect itself against the bringing in of drugs by smugglers, a practice that is constantly increasing.

World-wide publicity, Mr. Porter believes, the foundation for which has been laid at Geneva by the anti-opium conference, is the principal thing now necessary to force a limitation of the production of the opiates which are such a menace to civilization. Women are the most effective workers in the campaign, and Mr. Porter is warm in his praise of Mrs. Hamilton Wright, of Washington, and her associates in various lands in their battle against habit-forming drugs.

All the European nations which have possessions in the Far East where opium is grown face a stubborn financial problem in forwarding the anti-drug campaign, as their colonies derive a large portion of their revenue from opium, Mr. Porter says.

Opium, cocaine and other drugs are very valuable, and there are vast profits in the trade. The habit is so widespread in the Orient that it is undermining the British, French, Dutch and Portuguese colonies and working financial losses which are far greater than the income from opium taxes, to say nothing of the moral degradation it is bringing about. England and practically all the nations of Continental Europe are suffering so badly from the smuggling of opium and the consequent spread of the use of drugs that there is a general awakening to the folly of defending the production on financial grounds.

Recent investigations have disclosed that India was smuggling opium into England by means of filling up the cavities in bamboo furniture. Field glasses recently shipped to the United States from Germany in considerable quantities were filled with cocaine. Lampsbodies and nearly all sorts of merchandise have been used as a hiding place for opium, and so much of this drug can be successfully hidden in the luggage of any traveler that government agents have found it impossible to prevent it from being smuggled.

Mr. Porter estimates that habit-forming drugs cause the United States an annual loss of $100,000,000.

Surely the protective warmth of galoshes is expressive of the Christmas Spirit. Any woman, young or old, would appreciate such a gift.
