Acceptance of Tendered Alimony Up to Courts

NORWICH, N. Y. (I.N.S.) — Can the courts compel the acceptance of tendered alimony? That is the unique question raised in the case brought in Supreme Court by Mrs. Edith Wilber Mix, of Sherburne, against Mrs. Myra Wilber, of Oneonta.

No reported case, it is said, either in this country or in England has presented the same conditions and there is absolute lack of precedents by which the court might be guided in determination.

The action grew out of one of the provisions of the will of the late Geo. L. Wilber, of Oneonta, which bestowed an legacy of $110,000 upon Mrs. Mix, with the condition that before payment was made Mrs. Mix must satisfy the judgment for alimony against David P. Wilber granted to Mrs. Myra Wilber in 1919.

Prior to the commencement of the action Mrs. Mix, through her attorney, L. L. Wilber, approached Mrs. Wilber with an offer of settlement, the sum of $25,000, which is held to be more than the amount due, being formally tendered in the presence of the witnesses.

Following refusal of the tender the action now pending was begun. As by the terms of Wilber's will his executor, the Wilber National bank of Oneonta, may not pay her legacy to Mrs. Mix until payment of the judgment has been made by her, she is naturally anxious to make payment, despite Mrs. Wilber's positive refusal to accept. Many matters relative to the disposal of the remainder estate of George L. Wilber depend on the settlement of the alimony claim.

COLLEGE LADS AND LASSIES. Boston Post. Well-to-do has challenged Harvard to a debate. Whether Harvard will risk putting its wit and logic against the girls remains to be seen. Apparently they are somewhat cocky about taking up the thing against them. They are, however, secretly afraid of letting a girls' college even row on the same river with them. Harvard's applications to a crew are frowned upon by Harvard women. Where then are college men really to meet college women? Where, indeed, but at the immortal dance. It remains for the best brains of Yale, the Phi Beta Kappas or Smith for a series of dances run by the two colleges. Is it that the dance sports cooperation and not rivalry, and this is what the best thinkers desire for men and women? Or is the bathroom the only place where men dare to match their skill against those girls of the new age?

ADVENTURES IN CANYON MANY

Lively Incidents Attend Travel of Grand Canyon of Colorado Surveyors.

WASHINGTON, CAP — Twenty-foot waves, 100-foot boulders and 100-foot lava pinnacles rising sheer out of the channel, radio troubles and a labor strike, were some of the trials and tribulations besetting the Geological Survey party which recently completed the last stretch of the Canyon of the Colorado. In his report on the trip, C. H. Birdseye, who headed the expedition, recorded that in the 450-mile journey encountered with encounters which had struck fear into the hearts of other hardy adventurers and night-mare became daily incidents.

The stretch of the Colorado River, from Lees Ferry, Arizona, to Needles, California, was the last that had not been accurately surveyed for mapping, and the purpose of the hazardous expedition was to locate possible dam sites for flood prevention, power development and irrigation. It was this party that was reported lost early last October, when a half-crushed boat was discovered that was thought to have belonged to them. However, the ten men accomplished the feat with one broken rib the only casualty, and with the loss of only a small canoe.

The first task encountered by the engineers was that of tracking a 16-foot boat down a narrow, red-blasted in the side wall of the Canyon near Lees Ferry. This boat was taken by auto 140 miles, from Flagstaff, Arizona, the nearest railroad station.

The four boats used were eighteen footers, decked over at both ends with water-tight hatches and metal compartments for buoyancy and for keeping instruments and supplies dry. The last canoe was a light collapsible canvas craft, which was so completely demolished in its mishap that only the oars, oarlocks and skin were recovered.

One of the interesting features of the trip was the comparative ease with which radio messages were picked up, in the bottom of the canyon, even sometimes 1,000 feet below the rim. The death of President Harding was heard of within an hour after the event.

As the cockpits in the boats were large enough only to accommodate the engineer, who had already made arrangements, the two passengers, each year of the river lower down, fractur-was forced to carry and to lie down on the deck, holding on for life to the lines, and being continually drenched by spray and waves.

"The waves were mountainous," Mr. Birdseye reported, "and to some of us our first ride of this kind was a genuine thriller. But we afterward became so used to riding rough water and getting soaked that we vied with one another in making the plunge with a lighted pipe or cigarette without losing the light."

Upsets were not unusual. At one time one of the men was thrown out of his boat, turning a complete somersault, and going down out of sight. But he soon reappeared, caught the boat which had not turned over, climbed aboard and weathered the rapids. Another boat was tossed high in the air in another rapids, and when it came down, bottom-side up, the men were thrown out between it and the rocky banks, one narrowly escaping being crushed.

B. W. Burchard, the topographic large enough only to accommodate the engineer, who had already made arrangements, the two passengers, each year of the river lower down, fractured a rib while scrambling over slippery rocks to a station. The injury was painful, but he insisted on being allowed to continue the work, and actually did so for 12 days, until the job was completed and he had connected his two surveys.

A 21-foot rise of the river followed several heavy rain storms, and kept the party scrambling all one night to safeguard the boats, move camp, and keep supplies dry. The river was full of drift wood, including great tree trunks which were at times thrown completely out of the water. The waves were estimated as 20 feet high.

and their spray dashed as high again, ten minutes."—Kloda-Hans (Copenhagen). The party took to the water August 1, at Lees Ferry, and arrived at the end of their water trail October 19, a little more than two months and a half for the 450-mile trip, of which only 13 days were not given to actual traveling.
