VOTERS ARE BALLOTING IN ENGLAND

and his Labor cohorts. No one can say just how Labor will fare in this contest. In the last election Labor made surprising strides and became the party of the opposition. If Labor makes equal progress in this election there is a chance of Labor coming into control of the Government. On the other hand, the Labor Party in this election has to face a re-elected Liberal Party, and there is a possibility that the Liberals, whose votes were split in the last election, may take sufficient seats away from Labor to dispose that party from its place as chief opposition of the Government.

When polling started the strength of the contending parties in Parliament was as follows:

Conservatives	332
Liberal	144
Labour	114
Others	11

If the Liberals and Labor combined they would be able to elect a Conservative government. It will mean that Stanley Baldwin will have an unseverable majority in Commons and will not be able to carry out his program. Further, it would necessitate the formation of a coalition government.

English politics is tricky, and it is hard to make predictions.

even on election day, but the best judgment of the political seers seems to be that the Conservatives are going to lose their safe majority today, and if they are returned it will be with an unsafe majority. There is an even chance that no party will be returned with a safe majority, and a coalition government comes in to save the situation. Lloyd George will enter the Cabinet either as Foreign Secretary or as Chancellor of the Exchequer.

COOLIDGE SPEAKS TO CONGRESS

ernment assistance in the disposition of exportable wheat. He declared against price-fixing for farm products; against repeal of the rate section of the Transportation Act; and against revision of the tariff law.

Making his first pronouncement on many public questions, the President presented a series of succinct recommendations without attempt at argument. He used exactly nine words in disposing of the bonus question. After urging adequate care for disabled former service men and generally in providing such care, he said: "I do not favor the granting of a bonus."

"The treatment of the world court and the Mellon tax plan was almost as brief. In approaching the court problem he noted that American foreign policy always had been guided by the principles of avoidance of permanent political alliances sacrificing independence and of peaceful settlement of international controversies. He called attention that the United States acting on these principles had for nearly twenty-five years been a member of The Hague Tribunal and added that the proposed world court was "a new and somewhat different plan."

"This is not a partisan question," he added, "it should not assume an artificial importance. As I wish to see a court established, and as the proposal presents the only practical plan on which many nations have ever agreed, though it may not meet every desire, I therefore commend it to the favorable consideration of the Senate, with the proposed reservations clearly indicating our refusal to adhere to the League of Nations."

The endorsement of the Mellon plan was presented in the course of a discussion of the fiscal condition of the nation, during which the President called attention that through the budget system and economy in expenditures, the necessities of the government, exclusive of the Postoffice Department, had been brought down to $3,000,000,000.

"It is possible, in consequence, to make a large reduction in the taxes of the people," he continued. "A proposed plan has been presented in detail in a statement by Secretary of the Treasury which has my unqualified approval. It is a plan which could be considered through immediate enactment of legislation relieving the people of some of the burden of taxation. Of all services which the Congress can render to the country, I have no hesitation in declaring this one to be paramount."

The President preferred his message with a tribute to President Harding declaring "the world knew his kindness and his humanity, his greatness and his character," and that "he has made just more certain and peace more secure."

"He is gone," Mr. Coolidge said, "we remain, it is our duty under the inspiration of his example to take up the burdens which he has permitted to lay down, and to develop and support the wise principles of government which he represented."

From this laudatory President then launched upon his recommendations which, in addition to those relative to taxation, world court transportation and soldier legislation included:

Government operation of the war-built merchant marine until shipping conditions are such as to allow it to be disposed of advantageously.

Strengthening of the Coast Guard to combat from smuggling; rigid regulation of the major sources of liquor production; suppression of interstate traffic in liquor and promotion of respect for law.

Continuation of the policy of restrictive immigration, with immigrants to be selected abroad, and the immediate registration of all aliens.

Strengthening rather than weakening of the army and navy with additional airplanes for the army; more submarines for the navy; and increased defenses for the Panama Canal.

Action under private ownership of coal mines that will obtain greater continuity of production and greater public protection against "unbearable high" prices along the lines of the recommendations laid down by the Federal Coal Commission.

Relief for the farmer through lower taxes and freight rates; cheaper fertilizer; greater gratification which would permit reduction of the wheat acreage; diversification of farming; encouragement in the formation of co-operative marketing organizations; continuation of government loans, and assistance in exportation through the War Finance Corporation.

Sale of Muncie Shoals together with facilities for an auxiliary steam plant and rights of way for power lines so that the agricultural use of the nation may get greater supply and lower cost of fertilizer, with the sale price of the properties not a major consideration.

Anti-trust legislation; additional appropriations for vocational training in agriculture for migration of whites and negroes to formulate a better policy for mutual understanding and confidence.

Extension of the Civil Service to the prohibition enforcement field, exclusive of the members of the present force and placing in the classified civil service of post-graduates of the first, second and third classes.

Opening of intra-coastal waterways and control of the flood waters of the Mississippi and Colorado rivers; construction of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway and power project; and promotion of the super-power development of the Northwestern states.

Treatment of a commission of judges and lawyers to simplify judicial court procedure.

Limitation on child labor thru constitutional amendment.

Regulation of radio interference and aviation.

Promotion of highway construction and reforestation.

Relief to occupants of reclamation projects by empowering the secretary of the interior to suspend, readjust and rescind all charges against water users.

Prohibition of the issuance of tax exempt securities by a constitutional amendment.

In addition to these and a score more of recommendations, relatively of less importance, Mr. Coolidge discussed foreign debts, declaring himself against cancellation and for a reasonable adjustment in accordance with the principle adopted for the British debt, and announced he would oppose recognition of Russia so long as the ruling regime refused to recognize the right of private property ownership and the debt contracts by Russia after the overthrow of the Czar.
