Escaped Convict in Airplane Fall In Ince's "Skin Deep," Coming to Arcade.

Can you imagine how a terrible fall from an airplane might prove to be a most fortunate accident to a convict who is escaping from the penitentiary?

It gave him an entirely new identity and changed his entire career.

Packed with thrills, human interest, and carrying enticing suspense clear to the last scene, the story is told in a remarkable Thomas H. Ince production, "Skin Deep," which opens for a two day run at the Arcade theatre beginning Friday.

Milton Sills, Florence Vidor, Marcia Manon, Frank Campeau, and Joe Singleton are featured in the exceptionally good cast. The picture is directed by Lambert Hillyer in a manner that portrays real art.

"The Ninety and Nine" Coming to Sherrys Theater Today, Tomorrow.

"The Ninety and Nine" is a real smashing special and oh, what a thriller! Given first a smashing plot, full of the big scenes that lead logically, and with the utmost of suspense, up to the big climax, Director Smith made the most of his material.

The big, record-breaking thrill is the rescue of an entire countryside from the fury of the flames, as the forest fire races towards the surrounded town. It is destined to be received as one of the finest things of its kind ever seen on the screen. Great stretches of burning forest, whole towns in flames, hundreds of men, women and children running frantically to cover. The little telegraph office is besieged open, you ride with that chap. You feel the hot breath of the smoke with shouting, cursing, praying men, demanding an engine to take the trapped inhabitants to safety. There is not an engine on the division. Besides himself, the dispatcher remembers that an official's engine with a private car is on the siding at the nearest station. But the official declares it is a fool's chance, and will not permit the use of the engine. Then the one man appears—the young derelict, who chances to be on the scene. Without hesitation he rolls the steel monster out on the main track, and heads into the furnace of roaring flames ahead.

Then, when you reach this point in the footage, you just naturally grab the back of the seat ahead of you, and with your mouth half open gaze; you hear the rhythmic roar of the great machine, and the crashing fall of the pines at the side of the track. You literally ride with the courageous engineer as the locomotive sweeps through that hell on its errand of mercy.

And, somehow, you sense the immense amount of expense and time required to produce this prolonged thriller, which is not a few feet of flashed disaster, but a veritable panorama of destruction, appalling in its terrible grandeur.

New School Given Flag By Klansmen

HELIX. — The new $15,000 school building at Holdman was dedicated Friday evening with an appropriate exercise under the direction of L. N. Green, principal. The building has a full basement for play and lunch room, and two school rooms which together serve as a community center. Rev. F. A. Hellis, of Pendleton gave the principal address on "The Relation of the Public Schools to the Nation's Destiny." Short talks were given by W. W. Green, county superintendent, and A. C. Voelker of Helix. Music was furnished by Pendleton visitors. At the close of the program 12 robed Klansmen of Pendleton appeared and presented an American flag to the school. The exercises closed with refreshments served by the women of the district. Last spring two adjoining districts consolidated with the Holdman district and the pupils are transported in school buses.

MORE CAPITAL FOR FARMERS

Economic Conditions of Agriculturists in U. S. Are Changing.

NEW YORK (AP)—The increasing amount being loaned to American agriculture by the life insurance companies shows the changing economic conditions in this country," said Vice President Lee A. Phillips of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance company of Los Angeles, Calif., at the seventeenth annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents here. "These conditions are tending steadily to increase the amount of capital required for the average farm and the proportion of that capital which must be found by borrowing on mortgage. It is a matter of cold, hard fact that a farm mortgage is, in these days, a necessity for the young farmer and a support without which he can hardly succeed.

"A net increase of more than $132,000,000 during the first 10 months of 1923 in the life insurance companies' holdings of farm mortgage loans shows the present trend of life insurance's contribution to the enlarging needs of the agricultural sections of the country. The net increase of the life insurance companies' holdings in this class of security during the entire year of 1922 was $147,000,000. Thus the companies have loaned far more to agriculture in 10 months of this year than in all of 1922. A conservative estimate of the increase for November and December of this year will bring the total increase of the companies' holdings for the year well beyond $290,000,000—double their average annual increase in this class of security for the eight years ended with 1922. The total of farm mortgage loans held by 52 of the leading life insurance companies, as of October 31, 1923, was $1,626,000,000, as compared with $647,000,000 at the end of 1914.

"Life insurance funds constitute the greatest single factor in financing the agriculture of the United States. For 50 years they have been an important resource of the farmer seeking financial assistance. Today we find most of the 253 life insurance companies domiciled in the United States sending a portion of their reserve funds to the agricultural sections. The smaller companies naturally loan on farms in their home states and in contiguous territory, while the larger companies dispatch these funds to many sections—sometimes completely across the country."

The subject of Mr. Phillips' address was "Farm Mortgages Not a Lien But a Support." He continued: "Generally speaking, a debt is not an asset and just now when many farmers are struggling under a mountain of debt piled high by injudicious over-extension and accentuated by lower prices for their products, it might seem at first a rash assertion indeed that farm mortgages are not a lien but a support. The popular impression, too, may be that a farm mortgage is an unmixed evil. The playwright and the cartoonist have used it as a symbol of capitalistic oppression. Public sentiment has classed it with the drought, the blight, the flood, the cyclone and with the pestilential horde of crop destroying insects that are the farmers' constant foes.

"However, in all the business world, few, if any, prosperous concerns have been builded or operated without the use of borrowed capital, evidenced by bank loans, bond issues, preferred stocks or exchanges. It is sound business experience that with sufficient capital, the man with adequate brains and industry has a vastly better chance of success. The farmer is a business man and, as such, must, to an increasing degree, take cognizance of the natural laws upon which commercial success depends.

"The greatest good to the farming industry will come when the farmer is made to realize that his 'silent partner' insists on a legitimate use of the funds borrowed in the upbuilding and advancement of farming and that the farmer who does not use his funds cannot have loans from the insurance companies. It is a mistake to loan simply upon the value of the security. The loan should also be based upon the honesty, industry, thrift and capacity of the borrower. In a word, personal contact with and constant supervision of the borrower contribute both to his success and to the security of the loan. When the farmer is made to appreciate the loan as a cooperation with him and an encouragement of his thrift and industry, he will regard his 'silent partner' as a welcome, if necessary one, and appreciate that his mortgage is not entirely a lien, but in greater measure a support."

Dog Cared for in Will

EUGENE, Ore.—Five hundred dollars was set aside by Mrs. Clementine Reisner, who died at her home in this city a few days ago, for the care of her poodle dog during its lifetime, according to her will, admitted to probate. The executor of the will is directed to retain this amount and expend not more than $5 a month for the dog's care.

In her will Mrs. Reisner states that the animal "has almost been a member of the family." She was the widow of Frank Reisner, civil war veteran and county treasurer.

The rest of the estate, exceeding nominal sums bequeathed to three nieces in Indianapolis, Ind., is left to her grandchildren.

The great need of the wheat farmer at present is fewer experts and more experts.
