Hoot's Latest Movie Is Picturing the "Extra's Woe"—Showing at Star.
Some of the amusing incidents of daily life in the motion picture studios of Universal City, California, are shown in "The Thrill Chaser," Universal-Gibson special production which will be shown at the Star Theatre Christmas day, mature and night.
A new amateur of an extra man, right off the ranch, caught his thumb in a very important scene on a set and pulled the set down with a crash that rivaled "The Last Days of Pompeii," which it went the company was filming. This same extra man, not used to camera technique, wandered on to everyone's set in front of the camera and ruined the emotional scenes—these are some of the humorous experiences which are told in the story.
In the motion picture life sequences three directors, shown on the screen in the pictures they direct, are shown in the flesh at their task of directing players. One of them is Sedgwick, the others are King Baggot and Henry Hathaway, who are shown at one time, and all remember them. Henry is the director of "The Flame of Life," "The First," "The Abysmal Brute," "A Lady of Quality," and, at the time, "The Thrill Chaser" was finished, was just starting work on Hoot's "Tarkington's classic of American life, "The Turnout." Besides the regular cast, including Billie Dove, Gino Corrado, James Neil, William K. Lawrence, and others, such celebrities as Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry, Laura La Plante and Ronald Denny appear.

Gorgeous Scenes For Racing Film—Showing at Sherrys Tuesday, Wednesday.
There probably never was a motion picture in which so many widely separated "locations" played such a big part in intensifying the interest in the story as in the case in Jack Pickford's new production "Garrison's Finish" which, in a notable way, marks this popular star's return to the screen after an absence of about two years during which time he has been directing his famous sister, Mary Pickford. Scenes of the Kentucky Derby at Louisville, also the Metropolitan Handicap at New York and other scenes at San Francisco, Pasadena, Exposition Park, Los Angeles, and on the Mojave Desert are included in this Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation release which comes to the Sherry Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday. Stock Gambling Brings Rain to Two Wives. See How It Happened At Arcade Theater.

Two devoted wives of gamblers are found in the gripping Paramount drama of New York financial and domestic life, "The Silent Partner," a Charles Maigne production, which will be the feature of the Arcade today and Tuesday. Only one has the strength of character to plan and carry through the reform of her speculative husband. Another succumbs and is carried down to poverty; the third is ignorant of what her husband has done till too late. Leatrice Joy, Owen Moore and Robert Ellisson are featured.
Leatrice Joy is cast as the wife of a stock broker's clerk, played by Owen Moore. When he risks their modest fortune on the market, she prepares for the crash which she feels will ultimately come. From loving, domestic helpmate, her character changes to that of a hard woman, secretive and cold, hoarding all her husband's wealth on, against possible financial ruin. Not until he has lost all does she become her affectionate self again.
Robert Ellisson is the broker who employs Moore as clerk, and afterwards accomplishes his downfall in Wall Street. It is the wife of an officer of his clerk, played by Leatrice Joy, who is too luxury-loving and weak to demand of her husband that he save her suffering consideration to assure a definite income. Like the other couple, their wealth evaporates, but neither has saved, and both are
