Jackie Coogan Scores Triumph in "Long Live the King"

Undoubtedly the greatest picture in which Jackie Coogan has been permitted to use his remarkable genius is Metro's "Long Live the King," now the feature at the Sherry theatre. Last night its premier appearance in this city was attended by a great and appreciative audience which through the evening continued to give ample evidence of the tremendous popularity which Jackie now has at his command. In fairness to him it is such beautiful and impressive productions as "Long Live the King" that enhance his popularity and make him more beloved.

The story of "Long Live the King" is a familiar one to readers of American books. It is a screen version of the famous novel of the same name written several years ago by Mary Roberts Rinehart and which attained a tremendous sale. It hinges around the romantic adventures of the little Crown Prince of Lavinia—a country threatened at every turn by revolution and anarchy. It is a highly exciting romance and the producers have not only lost none of the fascination of the novel, but have added to its delight by giving it a wonderfully beautiful presentation.

Jack Holt to Appear at Arcade in "The Marriage Maker"

An alliance of millions and a title, but a marriage without love, is the unhappy outlook confronting Jack Holt as a featured player in "The Marriage Maker," a new Paramount picture which will be on view at the Arcade theatre today and Thursday. He mingles on the seas and loses a large sum of money. About to commit suicide, he is persuaded by "the girl" to accept a loan from a money lender. He does so and pledges his family portraits as security. The paintings are destroyed by fire and the money lender demands payment. Lord Stourbury is about to end his life when something happens. This leads up to one of the most unusual climaxes ever seen in any picture. Agnes Ayres is featured with Mr. Holt in this exceptional photoplay.

FLOATING MINE DANGER IS NOT PAST SAY DANES

COPENHAGEN. (AP)—Notwithstanding the fact that it is more than five years since the world war ended the seas have not been entirely freed of mine fields and those remaining are a constant menace to navigation.

Captain Zieher, chief of the Danish hydrographic office, recently said that energetic work has been done to sweep up the various anchored mine fields, but the number of mines laid and the long time they have been lying has resulted in a number getting free of their moorings and they are now drifting about ocean highways like infernal machines.

part of the Gulf of Finland, where a number of mines had been observed. Captain Zieher disputes the theory that the mines are not dangerous when floating.

Of the known anchored mine fields, Captain Zieher said there is now only one big field west of the Gulf of Cronstadt. This enables Russia to completely control the approach to Petrograd, as all navigation to that port must go via the two-mile broad mine-sweep channel which can easily be cleared if desired, as well as a number of small fields in the Black Sea which stop the free navigation to the Russian ports there.

The field west of the Gulf of Cronstadt stretches from the south end of Hogland eastward to the mouth of the Gulf of Cronstadt. The northern boundary is formed by a line from Hogland over Sommers, Norra, Hall and Aivatt. The southern boundary runs over Little Timors and Great Timors to about 15 miles north of Narva. A mine-sweep channel, two miles broad, known, leads from the south end of Hogland to the mouth of the Gulf of Cronstadt where the light-vessel "Prism" lies at anchor with pilots aboard for the purpose of guiding vessels further on. The depth in Petrograd Sea Canal is now 25 meters.

Attention is also drawn to the fact that the lighting and buoyage of the Gulf of Cronstadt has been considerably altered.
