Happy Event At Country Club

A most enjoyable occasion was had at last evening when Mrs. and Mr. L. Lilly and Mr. and Mrs. R. Turner entertained more than a hundred guests at a dancing party in the Country Club.

Exquisite decorations transformed the club room's interior into an artistic ballroom. Until after midnight the guests enjoyed one of the most delightful dancing parties in the Country Club.

Lilly's five-piece orchestra furnished the music and every moment of the evening was marked by social activity by the entire party.

A fine luncheon was served at midnight.

The Loyal Women's class of the Presbyterian church will meet in annex of the church this evening, January 17. Officers will be elected and reorganization will take place for the coming year. All members are requested to be present and all workers of the Bible school invited.

Union (Special)—Mrs. Mabel C. Hughlin, of North Powder, who has been teaching the piano to many of the young people this fall, will give a recital at the high school assembly room recently.

Mrs. Laughlin is an accomplished teacher of music for high school students who will make regular appearances at the school.

The recital was practically all the notes by her pupils and was described as very interesting and entertaining.

Among those who took part were: Eldred, Lowell and Eldora Peterson, Edith Kirkman, Mildred Kennedy, Blanche Johnson, Helen and Ruth Baxter, Marjorie, Marjorie (Chim) and Lola Holt, Mrs. Will Hutchinson rendered two vocal numbers.

The Blue Mountain boys celebrated their first anniversary Monday evening, January 14. The boys' organization, an auxiliary of the organization, were present and a good time was enjoyed, at which delicious refreshments were served.

Skirts and Slips

The difficulty of making a skirt hang straight when it fits low on one's hips and is worn without a corset has created such garments as these. They are skirts attached to very long cambrics. Where the blouse ends the skirt begins and there is no extra clumsy thickness caused by their overlapping as there would be if a skirt with a normal waistline were worn.

Hints for the Housewife

CARAMEL CAKE.

Three cups brown sugar; 3 cups white sugar; 2 tablespoons butter; 2 1/2 cups milk.

Brown the white sugar in a pan over the fire, stirring constantly to avoid burning. All the brown sugar and the milk and butter and boil until it forms a firm ball in cold water (225 degrees F.). Take it off the fire and allow to cool, then beat until the mixture is smooth, stiff and creamy and spread it on the cake.

APPLES—DUMPLINGS

Three cups bread flour or 2 1/2 cups pastry flour; 1/2 tablespoon butter; 6 eggs; baking powder; 1 teaspoon salt; 1-2 cup shortening; 1 cup milk; 4 tablespoons sugar; 1/2 tablespoon butter; 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon; 3 apples pared cut in 1/2 and cored.

If sour milk is used, add 1/2 teaspoon soda and use only 4 tablespoons baking powder.

All measurements are level. Sift the flour once before measuring. Cream the shortening and sugar together, add the beaten eggs and beat. Then add the milk alternately with the flour, salt and baking powder which have been mixed and sifted. Add the vanilla last. Bake in a well greased 9x9 pan, 25 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven (355 degrees F.).

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of expensive study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities commonly called uric acid deposits were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians and experimenters and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery, which he called Altherin, to others who took it, with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. He has therefore instructed the Red Cross Drug Co. to disseminate Altherin with the understanding that if the first trial does not show the way to complete recovery he will gladly return your money without comment. Mail orders accepted.

Bake in a hot oven (475 degrees) for 15 minutes. Then pour about 3 cups hot water into the pan to make jelly for baking. Lower the temperature of the oven and bake for about 30 minutes more, basting them every 10 minutes. Serve hot with cream.

EDITH KELLY HAPPY AGAIN

Life as Millionaire's Wife Palled on Her so She Quit It—Girlish Ideals Smashed.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Edith Kelly Gould, divorced wife of Frank Jay Gould, who has been the center of long drawn out litigation, declares that at last she has found happiness and it is "not even the empty luxuries of a millionaire's wife."

Miss Kelly, who has been forbidden by French courts to use the name of Gould, has written of her life as a millionaire's wife in the following article.

By Edith Kelly Gould. Written for International News Service.

LONDON—Every little Cinderella working girl dreams of a Magic Prince. He must have a golden wand that will touch the drab texture of her life and turn it into all the rainbow glories of riches and wealth.

Other words, he must be a millionaire.

Wonderful dreams, fantasies, wishes and goals—all these things are showered on the girl very rarely a millionaire, the happy combination of fate, mother, magic carpet and Aladdin's lamp.

I used to dream of such a transformation of my life when I was in the "chance" at the Gaiety Theatre. I worked hard for my few pounds a week. Life often seemed to me drab and dull, and my people were not well off and I helped them all I could.

Then suddenly the unbelievable happened. I went with the Gaiety chorus to New York, and there I met Frank Jay Gould, a member of one of the richest families in America—a multi-millionaire.

He told me he loved me. It seemed a dream. I feared to get a grasp of the reality but I should have known at my tenth like a many-colored bubble.

Counted 7 Months.

Frank Gould started me for seven months before I consented to marry him. He was constantly in the theatre where I played writing at the stage door for me after the performance with costly flowers and extravagant gifts.

Life for me then was a foretaste of what it should be after a year. I thought—a gay succession of suppers and dances and parties with him and his millionaire friends.

He promised over and over again that every luxury the world could offer should be mine and I was married.

Finally, over on this side, he gave a house party in Scotland, at Abbotsford—Sir Walter Scott's famous home—and I was one of the guests. It was there, in those romantic surroundings, that I promised to marry him.

He did not give me any time to change my mind, but rushed me to Edinburgh, where we were secretly married by the sheriff.

"And now," I thought like all young brides, "there will be only happiness for ever and ever afterward."

There was both luxury and happiness for a time. Everything

Here's Lookin' at You!

Introducing "The Princess," prize-winning Angora in a recent Berlin cat show. Cuts, isn't it?

I could desire my husband gave me.

Loved Earrings.

I had a childish fancy for earrings. Every pair that took my eye was mine for the asking, how ever beautiful and costly. I had pearls and diamonds and emerald and jade. My husband ransacked the jeweler's shops to please me.

One of Mr. Gould's first gifts to me was a pair of a whimsical thought.

I had been a chorus girl in the Gaiety Theatre. Very well, I should have the Gaiety Theatre for my very own! He bought it and gave it to me.

He would take me shopping and buy me three or four thousand pounds' worth of dresses in a morning.

"My honeymoon was sheer bliss. We went first to the south of France and then to Mrs. Gould's beautiful home in Albany, LaSalle, near Paris. There was a whirl of excitement and entertainment there and in New York, where we spent a few months in the season. Realizing I had attained my heart's desire.

And yet—

I began to realize that I was very, very bored. I who had always enjoyed my living, was not allowed to lift a finger in the way of work. There were servants to do everything. I was not allowed to put on my own bedroom slippers or give a single thought to household affairs. The idleness and aimlessness of my days drove me nearly frantic.

I could not choose my own friends. I had to accept my husband's circle. And they were all rich. I lunched and dined and supped with millionaires. And nobody talked about anything but money. I smiled; I laughed; I talked money.

And yet, odd as it may sound, in the midst of all this money I was practically penniless. Everything was provided for me but my husband liked to do the buying himself, and I had always an empty purse.

When I wanted to send something home to my people, as I had always done when I was working, I actually had to beg for my mail on the butler. They were financially better off than I, a millionaire's wife, for I was too proud to ask.

This attitude was not peculiar to my husband. I have noticed that nine millionaires out of ten are extremely timid in small matters. They would rather give a check for 20 thousand pounds than ten shillings in money.

Such at least was my experience. For all the wildly extravagant shows he gave me, my husband was seriously annoyed at my buying a dozen pairs of gloves or stockings.

I was more and more bored and unhappy. I began to dream again. And this time my dreams were the reverse of the dreams I had had in my childhood.

Then I had longed for idleness and luxury. Now idleness and luxury were dust in my mouth and I longed with all my soul for the "five-hundred-working days of the stage, when the money I earned was mine to spend and I could call by my own name.

I began to earn my own living, as a dancer, sometimes in London sometimes in Paris.

Friends Shocked.

Everybody was shocked at me. So many people had turned their backs on me that the newspapers another has they seem wonderful to you. But you need not be possessive them without the most necessary things in life—freedom and love and work—to realize they are not in themselves alone worth having.

My husband was the most shocked of all. He thought he had given me everything I could possibly want. He was also very angry, of course.

We were divorced.

He said, "I shall fight you in the courts, you won't get anything more out of me."

But I am free! I have no longer any of the fixtures that once in the old routine of hard work that was mine before I met Frank Jay Gould, the millionaire.

But I have learned where happiness is to be found—and it is not amid the empty luxuries of a millionaire's wife.
