OPPOSITION IS TO BE STRONG

Reds' Pitching Staff May Prove a Nemesis of New York Giants This Season.

CINCINNATI, O. (AP)—Cincinnati, with its "Royal Red" pitching staff, is knocking at the door of baseball's hall of fame. On paper it would appear that the Reds have the strongest pitching staff in the National League. The "Royal Red Seven," as the staff has been called, is composed of the veterans Landon, Denton, Danahoe, Mays and Fixley, and the recruits, May and Sheehan.

There was the leading pitcher in the major leagues last year, when he won 27 and lost eight. Fixley won 20 and lost 12; Danahoe, 21 and 15; Denton 11 and 10. These six quartets won a total of 82 games, almost enough to land a pennant, and if they do as well during the coming season, the chances of the Reds will be bright.

It is difficult to figure just how the new pitchers will fit in. Carl Mays, the Yankee castoff, took part in only seven games with the world's champions last season, and although he won five he ranked near the bottom in the earned run average. Jake May, the Pacific coast southpaw last season won 18 and lost 22, which was not an impressive record as he compiled in 1922, when he won 35 and lost only nine games. Sheehan has made an excellent record in the American Association. Last season he won 21 games and lost nine.

Dr. J. M. Moran, manager of the Reds gets from this into a winner and a fair performer he will be in a position to seriously challenge the monopoly which the New York Giants have had on the National League pennant for the last three years. The three pitchers cost the Cincinnati club close to $100,000 in cash and players, which is proof of the extent to which Garry Herrmann, owner of the club, is willing to go to insure a championship contender.

Carl Mays, wearing the flannels of the National League, will be an uncertain quantity. He experienced his first bad season in the major leagues in 1923, but Manager Moran is gambling that his underhand delivery will prove a puzzle to the hitters of the National League for one season at least.

With two more weeks of basketball in the northern section of the Pacific coast conference, Oregon is at the head of the conference by a wide margin. Washington and the Oregon Angies are right at the heels of the Webfooters.

Washington did some fast manipulating according to the Seattle papers, and should it win its remaining games at home and should Oregon and the Angies also win all their games at home, then Washington will hold the conference by a scant half game. That is because the Washingtonians played only one game against Montana, which is not on the schedule of the two Oregon schools.

Bob Hager, coach of the Angies, said yesterday that should Washington win the championships because of the victory over Montana he would protest to Dean Carrington, president of the Pacific coast conference, and ask to have the Montana game thrown out or have Montana play a game at Corvallis.

SEALS TO START TRAINING TODAY

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The San Francisco football club, champion of the Coast League last season goes into training camp at Boyes Springs today with 29 players on the preliminary roster. The recruits will be given a thorough tryout. Manager Bert Ellison said.

While discussing football problems with the men, Maddock learned of the system formerly in use at Oregon. He was particularly interested in the defensive tactics and the blocking system, but had no official to offer. He informed the assembled candidates that he would follow the system to which they seemed best adapted and asked their utmost cooperation for the coming season.

During his visit to the campus Maddock inspected the physical education department, the athletic field and the football equipment. Plans are complete for starting the spring practice and the grid will start as soon as the coach gets back from Idaho.
