WON'T APPEAL STATE'S SUIT

Van Winkle Announced State Will Drop Case Against A. C. Marsters on Land Fraud Charge

SALEM, Ore. (By the Associated Press) — Attorney General Van Winkle announced today the state will not appeal its suit against A. C. Marsters, of Roseburg, to recover lands alleged to have been procured fraudulently by Marsters.

About 11,000 acres in Klamath county are involved in the case.

The reason for dropping the suit, according to reports, is that the evidence of the entrymen, which the state says was inconsistent with the affidavits sworn to by them, is not sufficient to firmly establish the state's case.

HERE'S ENGLISH AS IT'S SPOKEN IN OL' LONNON

PARIS, (By Associated Press)—The Chamber of Deputies rose at 4:30 o'clock this morning, haggard after an all night session to which it was forced by Premier Poincare in an effort to speed up consideration of his fiscal program.

When the session ended 21 of the articles on the program had been approved.

Consideration of the remainder will begin tomorrow.

The Premier carried his famous Article 3, providing for a 20 per cent increase in taxation, but only after a fight against the stiffest opposition and by the smallest majority the present government has ever received in the chamber.

took up with frantic haste. Railroad employees quickly identified the uncanny noise that caught the attention of night employees a few minutes before. At the time the yelling round house crew had been made inquisitive by sounds they could not identify, but had soon forgotten them.

"These were undoubtedly the roarings of the lion as he dashed between cars, and, it is supposed," said the narrator, "became lost in a labyrinth of strange noises and blinding lights.

"Instinctively the posse worked toward the west end of the yards and later developments showed the wisdom of their action. At the foot of the North Second street viaduct the posse found a family en route home from the first show in panic and hysterics. Out of the darkness had flashed an apparition, striking the lady and a small child a glancing blow as it passed. The woman fainted and the children were still screaming in fright when the posse came upon the hapless family.

"The police chief saw to it that they reached their homes in safety," the nervous young man said with an attempt to be telling the truth, "and reports today are that the lady is not the worse for her experience. Except such results that follow a restless night. The children were unharmed.

"All night the posse searched the foothills nearby the city and at daylight returned to notify nearby towns to post armed guards at the outskirts of the villages in the mountains. Pendleton has also been notified to be observant of the beast should his night ramblings take him hither."

And then the wild-eyed one collapsed under the strain and fell on a typewriter, knocking keys about in a mad way.

Editor's Note—The city editor, after the young man had left for his business, which he had sadly neglected during the telling of the tale, investigated the above story and finds that the "lion" was not nearly as ferocious as was first believed, that the police and sheriff had passed a comparatively quiet night, and in fact, that the tale was more or less an attempt to make the newspaper the victim of an antiquated system of press agents.

But due to the fact that it isn't often that such a wild attempt is made to hoax he public, the city editor believed that the story was too good to kill and so the young man's tale is printed today, not only as a source of amusement to the readers but also as a warning to mothers to teach their sons while yet in an early stage, to mimic Honest Abe Lincoln, and not attempt to tell tales that make Ananias and Baron Munchausen turn over in their graves and sneeze.

At any rate, the "lion" and his companion mouse will be on hand at the Arcade theater tonight when the Grande Ronde Chautauqua association presents the "Lion and the Mouse," a four-act drama, on which the curtain will rise at 8:15 o'clock.

The Chamber of Commerce quartette, composed of G. L. Dutton, Elmer Stoddard, Sherwood Williams and G. E. Bernis, will appear in song both Tuesday and Wednesday night during intermission.

started right out after votes while the members of the major parties are still juggling around for delegates to the nominating conventions!

They expect to campaign in 35 states and poll 750,000 votes.

Which is some improvement over the several hundred votes tallied in 1912, when Wallace ran for the first time.

It was his debut in politics, and his party's entry into the national field.

"We called it the Land Value party then," he recounts smiling, "and had less than 15 workers in the group. We couldn't get our names printed on the ballots. So we wrote them in ourselves.

"But this year it will be different."

Wallace is a kindly man, 64 years old, who is a manufacturer of electric motors, when he isn't studying up on the land question.

He was born on the West Side of New York, and started work when he was 15.

"I never gave politics much thought," he went on. "I was too busy making a living. But the panic of '73, unemployment and poverty with its consequences, set me thinking about the precariousness of our situations.

"I wanted to know what brought such conditions about. I wanted to find out how they could be avoided.

"But I couldn't find out what I was looking for. My teacher at night school couldn't help me. The books I read didn't enlighten me, until one day I ran across Henry George's 'Progress and Poverty.'

"I found the answer. It lay in the solution of our land problem.

"From 1885, when I first read the book, until 1910 I did nothing politically. I voted, of course, casting my ballots for those candidates who I thought to be best.

"But in 1910 a group headed by Joseph P. Darling, a former assistant district attorney of New York, got together at a conference and founded the Land Value Tax party.

"I was named its candidate in the 1912 election.

"Darling's death in 1916 put a crimp to the party's activities in the next presidential campaign.

"But in 1920 we put up candidates in 16 states. The name of the of the party had been changed to the Single Tax party, and Robert C. Macauley of Philadelphia was named the presidential candidate.

"We polled some 500,000 votes.

"But we are going to get many, many more this year."

The name was changed again.

"For the Commonwealth Land party," says Wallace, "better explains our idea than the Single Tax."

This party would free the land of the country from private ownership, and by renting it lift the burden of taxation from the people.

"All evils arising out of our unjust economic conditions," says its platform, "such as business depressions, hard times, unemployment, poverty and the fear of poverty, and housing conditions and the crime, vice and diseases due to these conditions are the result of the private ownership of the earth and the appropriation of its products by the few.

"War and strife, now and always due to economic maladjustment, would disappear with the elimination of private ownership of land, which has ever been the basic and the cause of all the world's economic troubles."

Democrats Hold McAdoo Available for Leader to the constitution; "to clean out the veterans' bureau and pay a soldiers' bonus."

Sees Crisis Ahead

Following a restatement of his professional connections with E. L. Doheny, as given the senate oil committee, Mr. McAdoo told the conference, which was called to consider his availability as a presidential candidate that "a grave crisis confronts the nation and that crisis must be met without regard to cost." The progressive thought of the country, he said, must look to the democratic party for leadership.

"There is demoralization in government at Washington. The republican party has ceased to function," he said. Long applause greeted the announcement of each plank in the platform.

Mr. McAdoo did not appear before the conference until after it had unanimously adopted a resolution declaring him "pre-eminently available as the democratic candidate for the high office of president of the United States."

The resolution follows:

"Be it resolved by this conference that William G. McAdoo is pre-eminently available as the democratic candidate for the high office of president of the United States and is the hope of the progressive thought of the nation.

"It is further the sense of this conference that the record of Mr. McAdoo is an open book. His honesty and integrity in public and private life have stood the test of the most searching investigation.

"We denounce and condemn the recent infamous conspiracy which attempted to besmirch his name and proclaim that he has emerged from these attacks stronger than before.

"We unanimously demand his leadership."

GOGS NEED KNIT DRESSES DECLARES LADY GERTRUDE

LANDON, (AP)—Knitted jumpers for dogs—"to keep them warm when motoring," she said—were held by Gertrude, Lady Decies, at the winter show of the Pekingese club at Tattersall's.

The tiny jumpers, knitted by Lady Decies herself in woolly and silks of various colors, were designed by her to take the place of the old dog's "coat," which was usually a plain square piece of material wrapped around the animal's body. The new fashioned jumper is properly shaped with

GROWS TOKIO UNABLE TO WITHSTAND AIR ATTACK

TOKIO, (I.N.S.)—The latest feature of the campaign to move the capital from Tokio to Kobe or Kyoto, the ancient capital, is the claim of Dr. Hamaichi Uyeno, a professor of the Imperial University, that Tokio cannot be defended from an air attack. He also declares Tokio is too far from the geographical center of Japan and lacks sufficient historical and spiritual associations.
