Stock Prefer
Pastures Now

CLOVER CHECK—(SPECIAL)
—Grass is starting to grow to the extent that the stock in general prefer the pastures to the feed yards. The fall grain is also beginning to grow. In spite of the wonderful weather the farmers have started no definite spring work, because the weather is so unusual they are afraid it will not last.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dahlstrom moved to Island City this week, where they expect to farm for at least this season.

Miss Daisy Butler returned home this week after an absence of several weeks at her old home near The Dalles, where she was called by the death of her sister.

Several from Clover Creek enjoyed a social time on Wolf creek February 22.

Clifford Woods of Dufur, Oregon, who has spent the past two weeks visiting on Clover Creek, departed February 24th for Chicago where he will enter the Cal-Trade school. He does not expect to return to Oregon until next autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. George Carnos were business visitors to Union Saturday.

The past week seems to have been a general butchering week, several families having killed and prepared porkers for curing. The stubble pasture was so good last fall that the pigs were let run until snow fell and then put up to fatten, thus prolonging the season for butchering.

Axel Dahlstrom made a recent trip to Baker to have another portion of the case removed from his leg. Mr. Dahlstrom's leg was broken in November and he is still unable to walk without the aid of crutches.

Stop Falling Hair
Money
Back If It
Doesn't

Scalp specialists will tell you the big problem with scalp ailments is to get the people to form a consistent habit of taking care of their hair.

Van Em's Hair Scalp Massage comes in a patented bottle with a special rubber applicator attached. The method of application is easy—and cleanly. The treatment is fed through rubber nipples directly to the roots of the hair while the scalp is gently massaged. One minute a day with Van Em stops falling hair, restores itching scalp and grows new hair. Ask us about our 30-day treatment plan. We give you a positive guarantee.

How Honduras Does It

In the United States they are known under the appellation of elections, but in Honduras as well as in some others of the Latin-American republics they more resemble revolutions or civil wars. Such a fiery election is taking place in Honduras at this time for the quite sufficient reason that three politicians want to become president and none of the trinity can muster up the required majority.

When it became apparent that complications would set in, the United States sent a warship with a message to the effect that the Honduran congress would either elect a president in accordance with advanced theories of law and order or the United States would sever diplomatic relations.

The threat, curiously enough, had no appreciable effect. General Carias, one of the candidates, has taken the familiar road to the Nicaragua border, where a supply of revolutionist raw material is always on tap. In the meantime, the terms of the incumbent, Rafael Lopez Gutierrez, has expired; therefore Don Rafael Lopez is nothing more nor less than a tyrant.

The situation is, if possible, more complicated, from the Washington viewpoint, than was that in Mexico. Withdrawal of the American minister from Tegucigalpa will settle nothing. There is no faction in Honduras to which the United States with any show of consistency, could lend its moral support.

Bigger Than A King

Genealogists are reported to be registering excitement over the claims advanced by some of their number to discovery of lines of George Washington's descent that trace back to an early English king. But what of it? Why worry over Washington's ancestry? To Americans he was his own ancestor. No matter to what high forebear they trace him, they will not carry his ancestry back to a greater one than he.

He was more than a king. He was the chosen leader, in war and peace, of a people just emerging from autocratic dominion and entering democracy. He was one of the nation's founders. He helped to carve it from the British domain with his sword and to set it on the right path with his statesmanship. "Father of His Country," when that country is the home of representative government and free institutions as is America, is infinitely greater than any that kingship knows.
