Agricultural Outlook For 1924 Not Gloomy

Our figures do not indicate a generally decreased wheat acreage for 1924, the decrease being largely in states where crop may be successfully grown in place of wheat.

Live Stock Situation.
Dairy cattle have generally benefited well but prices are still below the cost of production and the industry is in a state of depression. The number of calves born in 1923 was 1,000,000, a record for the industry. The number of calves born in 1924 is estimated at 1,100,000, a record for the industry.

The dairy industry is going through a period of transition and the outlook is not bright. The number of calves born in 1924 is estimated at 1,100,000, a record for the industry.

HUNT'S LETTER

him to be employed by the German government, which wished to ascertain trade secrets of English textile manufacturers selling in this country.

Lester Means switched to the employment of the British government. He was also employed by the government of Mexico and later by the United States.

His mother, he says, was never to ask the "why" of an investigation. That, he considered, was none of his business. All he wished to know was "what" they wanted to find out. He'd find it if it was findable.

Means, the spy, is now the spied upon.

"They've got me telephone wires tapped," he explains with a grin. "I know, because I've got three taps on my phone hooked up so I can tell when there's someone else on the wire. I know how it's done, because I've tapped hundreds of 'em myself."

Intimidation of all sorts, he says, was brought to bear upon him to prevent his appearing before the Senate committee.

"Maybe they'll have me indicted for something else," he says, mentioning persons who may be damaged by his testimony. "But I'm already indicted for everything in the catalog so another one or two more won't make much difference. One friend informed me that the powers after me were omnipotent, that they controlled every situation, that they'd 'get me' if I dared speak the truth."

"Well, I'm giving 'em a chance. Maybe they'll get me. But they'll know they've been through a fight."

the committee's recommendation. This objection came after the committee had deliberated over two possible courses—that adopted an alternate plan in connection with the custody of the negotiators at the end of the month until he was ready to answer questions. It was decided that if the latter plan were followed the oil operator undoubtedly would lose his liberty on a writ of error.

tion this spring and this hotel should be one of the centers of interest in the show.

Goldings and Hanks will display the "Ward" Overland line. One of the highlights of their exhibit will be the popular little "Red Bird," which is a pretty model done in the most roomy color with a khaki top in the 1924 new in vogue.

Tracy Hollister will be on hand to explain the merits of the "Ford" and "Ford" line. The "Ford" has come into prominence lately by its hill-climbing ability which has been demonstrated on various occasions.

Sensing the spirit of the times, the "Ford" company brought out a complete line of new models for this season, featuring four-wheel breaks, non-body lines and major changes. All these will be in evidence at the display to be staged by Southern and other local representatives.

Studebaker built some of the first covered wagons to cross the plains years ago and is still building them—but the modern ones are propelled by powerful six cylinder motors instead of being pulled by slow moving oxen. A Studebaker will have several Studebaker models at the show, among them a modern "covered wagon," a new type sedan.

The Ford line which will be on exhibit by the Perkins Motor company at the show, needs little introduction. The Lincoln models, however, will be of much interest, representing as they do America's idea of a fine car, put out by Edsel Ford in direct competition with Europe.

Others who will have booths in the show are the Buick, Packard, Chrysler, and the Hudson.

The show will be held at the Hotel Grand Pacific, which has never before appeared on Broadway night will wind up being prepared and various new cars will be up to the customers will be exhibited on a show.
