O. A. C., Corvallis, (Special)—Julia Hulse of La Grande is a member of this year's graduating class in pharmacy. A trial examination in preparation for state board examinations June 5 and 6 was given to the graduating class by members of the faculty under Adolph Ziefle, dean of the school of pharmacy.

The purpose is to acquaint the students to the long, strenuous period of work. Official tests of the state board of pharmacy occupy two days. The trial examination was conducted between 8 and 5 o'clock the same day, covering all work taken in regular examinations. While grades were not announced, the results were gratifying to staff members, says Dean Ziefle.

Members of the state board will be here June 5 and 6 to conduct the final examinations in the rooms of the school of pharmacy.

Good for Walking

Panels of velvet brocaded silk with horizontal stripes make this attractive frock what it is. We recommend it for walking since the circular sides give much freedom about the feet. These's an easy grace to the sleeves that is most unusual this season.

Fashion Notes

Great Simplicity.

Paris.—Every effort now is bent toward great simplicity in frocks. The lines are straight and simple, and the whole air of the costume is that of avoiding heaviness and overelaboration.

Brightening All Garments.

Paris—Odd little touches of red today brighten all sorts of garments. Pompeiian is a rich, striking shade; however still in favor tipstick is among the brighter tints, and carnelian is a newer, more orange-hued color.

For Dance Dresses.

London. — The little corbanis (over) a Roumanian importation which heralded the visit of the Roumanian rulers—has been copied in white velvet and is now a favorite decoration for dance dresses. It is employed in rather large knots on shoulder and hip.

Pageant Gown for Bathing.

London. — The "parti"-colored gown which Columbine used to wear in the old pageants has been taken over as a bathing suit. These costumes today are made in many different colors and often in several different materials, the materials being feather-stitched together like old-time quilts.

Achieved With Butterflies.

New York.—The glorious blue-green achieved by Brazilian butterflies is one of the bright spots in the fashions now. Bits of these butterfly wings mounted upon silver under crystal are used as pendants, bracelets and earrings.

More Batik Than Ever.

New York. The batik scarf today has become more batik than ever. It thinks nothing of combining such antagonistic colors as cerise and orange, purple and scarlet. Indeed, the more fiercely the colors fight one another, the more chic the scarf.

Too Convenient to Drop.

New York. — So demurely convenient is the little cloche that women will not lightly give it up. A hat built on cloche lines shown here today is wood brown, with a flat "leather" of shirred brown silk.

CHILDREN CLEAN UP CITY

SEASIDE, Ore. — The Seaside American Legion post is reaching clear to the bottom of its trouser pockets these days. Recently the post offered a reward of 10 cents a sack for all sacks of cans, glass, and other rubbish, brought to the center of the city by school children. The sum of $18 was appropriated. When the day arrived for the children to get busy the pile of sacks near the city hall grew until it contained more than 1500 bundles of rubbish.

The legionnoires are scratching for pay dirt but maintain that their plan was the "goods" when it came to getting results.

Missionary Tells Experiences

HOOD RIVER, Ore.—David A. Byerlee, who spent his boyhood days here, addressed the congregation of First Christian church on experiences of a missionary in central Africa. Mr. Byerlee and his wife, both graduates of the Eugene Bible university and students at the University of Oregon, are home on a furlough from Bolenge, Belgian Congo. He exhibited curios used by the natives in their domestic life and warfare. Many members of pioneer families were present at the service to hear Mr. Byrlee.

HUNT'S LETTER

ery is but typical of the democratic mind, and that any outfit which regards the government as a three-ringed circus with which to amuse itself is even less fit to govern than are the Filipinos.

The term "A Texas Longhorn" used to be used to describe wild and unsophisticated members of congress from the southwest, who frequently ran amuck with parliamentary law and the dignity of the house. Those members, however, like the skittish longhorn steers for which they were named, have almost disappeared.

That the days of the longhorns may be long remembered, though, Congressman Quinn Williams from Texas will present to the National Museum some of the largest horns ever produced in the Lone Star state. One pair, now on display in his office, measures 7 feet 6 inches from tip to tip.

Managing editors are brave men. They will tackle anything once. Perhaps that's why Olin Kennedy, managing editor of a Miami paper and well known in newspaper circles in Indianapolis, Cleveland and Washington, has volunteered to serve as sergeant-at-arms at the democratic convention.

Any man who will undertake to keep order in that gathering, when the McAdoo and Underwood clans begin to exchange shots, say, will certainly need his nerve with him.

Representative Henry P. Rainey of Carrollton, Ill., makes money at farming. But not from wheat, or from corn and hogs. Rainey's profits as a farmer come from his stock and his goldfish!

A prudent man is one who has his blood pressure determined before reading little Willie's report card.

"Actions Talk Louder Than Words"

Congressman N. J. Sinnott

Says in his declaration for Republican nomination for Congress that he favors effective and thorough selection and restriction of immigration as embodied in the Johnson Immigration Bills; this sounds hardly necessary to anyone who has followed his past record in congress.

On February 4th, 1914 he cast his vote for the final passage of the Immigration Restriction Bill with Literacy Test, and on February 4th, 1915, the passage of the bill over the President's veto.

On March 30th, 1916 he voted for the final passage of the Immigration Restriction Bill, and on February 1st, 1917 he voted for the passage of the bill over the President's veto.

He is today working for and will vote for the final passage of the Johnson Immigration Bill.

These are his deeds, not words, and if you would have a Representative in Washington who is in a position from his years of service to assist in having thorough, select and restricted immigration, vote for
