Planned success greeted the explanation until some evildoer snatched the trophy and the opportunity to teach.

Referring to the fact that one Milton Stock, infidel, was a little tardy about reporting to Charlie Hibel's ball club, headline states: "Brooklyn Dodgers Want No Stars."

Merrily serving no doubt, to confirm Mr. Hibel's destination, that baseball is in its infancy.

Bedtime story

After upon a time there was an infant, that pouter, who did not appear in his house. He was in his ball room.

Fable Versus Fact

That the best of intentions are often frustrated and held up to ridicule is illustrated by the fact that when Len Hargis, golf professional, first came into prominence at Toledo, a story was circulated that the young man thought not wisely of himself but too much in support of his claim it was said that Hargis had caused to be executed on the driver an inscription reading: "The Hole in the Ground." This was quite a different version of the actual fact, but it was sufficient to present Hargis in an unfavorable light. He never had had "The Hole" carved on the driver in actual admiration of the driver, as was said in the inscription.

It is said that Al Nason, the outstanding claim to play outlast bases.

Are They Slipping?

Less than two years ago Ray Nelson, Wally Nelson and Steve O'Neil were regarded as the best outfielders in baseball. The Big Three of the major leagues. Today seems to be another matter. Nelson, a young man, is fourth most of the catching for Mr. Evers. White Sox while Nelson looks on O'Neil apparently was not benefited by a change of scene from Cleveland to Boston. Too many pained bats went back to the stands in a recent series with the Yankees. Moreover, Nelson was mainly alone.

As for Nelson, he caught very poorly, if at all, while the Yankees were dropping fair straight at the start of the season. Hoffmann and Longough then alternated behind the bat and the club started to win fourthly.

Dundee Will Prove He's Not Through

NEW YORK (UNA)—Although many so-called light experts are saying he's through, Johnny Dundee, holder of the featherweight and junior light-weight titles plus a long number of prize money in defense of his two crowns and the title of a third—that were now by one Henry Leonard, king of the light-weight class.

Incidentally, was hampered from going to fight and not a decision the other night to Rocky Karpas, the Buffalo fighter, but John is convinced that was somewhat of an accident, aided and abetted by his being out of form.

'HUSKY' SHELL CREW STRONG

(By COPELAND THURD) SAN FRANCISCO (UNA)—University of Washington, Seattle, will invade western waters this year with a stronger crew than ever.

Last year's national champions will travel to the Atlantic coast this season with the most powerful fully equipped shell crew turned out on the Pacific.

A "shell crew" for water in the Washington shell race, has been seen this year that several members of the 1923 champion had been named.

In the annual race with California, the Huskies beat the Californians by more than fourteen hours.

They finished sitting up, and hardly extended themselves at any stage of the race. Using a 22 oar stroke, the Washingtonians pulled steadily away from their rivals and left them almost abandoned in their wake.

Coach Russell Calloway, who brought the Westerners out winners at Poughkeepsie last year, he expects to run another winning crew.

LEONARD EASY AT 135 POUNDS

Any Good Boy Could Defeat the Lightweight Champ for Title, Says Mitchell.

(By COPELAND THURD) SAN FRANCISCO (UNA)—Any good boy can whip Benny Leonard in a little go for the lightweight crown!

That's what Pauley Mitchell, great Milwaukee boxer, says. Mitchell is now boxing on the Pacific coast, and while out this way expects to defeat his world's junior welterweight title.

According to Mitchell, Leonard would be no weak of he made the lightweight limit, 135 pounds, any fair youngster could topple him over.

wholesome respect for coast box-whirlwind affair in Chicago and was leading up until the last few seconds of the bout, when the champion knocked him so hard he just passed out of the picture.

"As a matter of fact, I don't think Leonard can ever make the lightweight limit again," says Mitchell. Some folks are surprised when they hear that Leonard wants to fight Mickey Walker, the welterling. Believe me, Leonard could easily go into the ring weighing 147 pounds and not be a bit fat. Walker is a real champion, but Leonard would give him a terrific right and might defeat him."

The Milwaukee pugilist has a vented some time ago by an A.S. He recently fought a fast bout with Jimmy Duffy, Oakland star, losing the decision. Prior to that he defeated Hobbs Tarpert, the northern welter champion, at Portland.

Mitchell declares he finds it difficult to get started in a four-round bout. He expects soon to master the coast style of fighting and is anxious to again exchange socks with Duffy, believing he can measure the coast leader in a return bout.

Dignity and Indignity

Identified gravity sits heavily on the shoulders of the United States Lawn Tennis Association at all times. Not for a moment can it relax from its official attitude of weighty calm.

Perhaps this accounts for the fact that the Tennis Association fails to see the joke of having American player-writers from "Swain Cup" competition under a rule that can have no effect on the writings of foreign representatives that will cause to this country the no other purpose than to life the same trophy.

Merry quips of any sort are seldom appreciated by the association, as Pat O'Hara Wood, of Australia, can testify. Mr. O'Hara Wood, guest of the Tennis Association at its annual dinner several years ago, appeared without evening clothes. Asked to speak, he gave the following reason for his failure to observe the conventions:

"While on my way here I planned to stop off somewhere and give a dinner talk. Seeing a store on the street, I went in and asked the proprietor if he had a suit to let for the evening.

"Sorry, says he, but I've hired my last suit. You see, there's a dinner at the United States Lawn Tennis Association."
