"His Mystery Girl"
 Good Character For Rawlinson.

Any young man, it's said by the best of philosophers, will do foolish things when he's in love. That's human nature, especially in a young man.
 "His Mystery Girl," the Universal feature starting Monday at the La Grande Theatre, today, is the story of a business big, a man without thought of pleasure, so absorbed in his work and the serious business of life that he can't even tolerate the pleasure that others are having. Let alone the possibility of harboring romantic notions.
 The hero of this Marion Orth story is a man whose mind and body are wrapped up only in the pursuit of business success. He hasn't the ghost of an interest in a "good time." But he has one thing—a partner who shares his apartment with him who worships about this mental condition and wishes to do all in his power to undermine the young business man's supreme career. He gets his opportunity and then the big works begin.
 From a most mild mannered fellow, he becomes transformed into a bold-buffing man who shares the mysteries of a haunted house, but armed sufficiently to withstand a lengthy siege.
 Herbert Rawlinson plays this role with the ability at characterization which has made him a popular star. Opposite him in the role of the girl who is his antagonist are Clara Dow, William Norrish, Wilma Macdonald, Josef Swickard, Robert McKim, Martha Mattos, Betty Francisco and Doug True.
 Also comedy.
