$80,000 in Furs and Gowns Revealed In "Black Oxen."

A majority of the scenes from the Lloyd production are laid to and near New York and the interior settings used in the filming of the drama are said to be some of the most artistic yet seen on the screen. In addition to the artistic backgrounds, "Black Oxen" is further enhanced pictorially by the elaborate wardrobe worn by Miss Griffith and other members of the cast, costumes and furs representing a cost of nearly $80,000.

The principal theme of the story develops when Madame Zerkow, rejuvenated by a mysterious glandular treatment, returns to New York after an absence of 24 years, to quietly attend the sale of her American business interests, and return to America to assist in her work. A visit to a first night described performance, however, attracts the interest of Claverine, a newspaper man, and Dinwiddie, an old friend, and both men start immediately to ascertain who the charming visitor is. It is Claverine who is first to meet Zerkow and while a short time their acquaintance develops into a romance.

Those who have seen "Black Oxen" declare that it contains all of the spice and entertainment of the American novel and that with the advantage of the camera Mr. Lloyd has given his subject a refined picture.

"Black Oxen" is to be presented at the Arcade with appropriate musical settings and short real subjects, starting today.

The annual money crop of the United States is about $10,000,000,000, which certainly is a record of the race.

Great Problems Discussed in "Daytime Wives"

The glory that was Greece, and the grandeur that was Rome, faded when the women, with their fondness for luxury and their love for excitement, dominated the ancient empires. The most famous cities of ancient times progressed while the women were frugal and industrious. When the feminine sex started to loaf on the job and take it easy, the former great empires began to decay.

In America, the great leaders of civilization, going to follow in the footsteps of Greece and Rome, and see its walls of progress crumble crashing down to earth? In the present time Daytime Wives, going to cause the decay and collapse of America the same as she did our great empires of antiquity?

Emile Chautard, the famous director, in the production of "Daytime Wives" showing at Sheriffs today for the last time has painted a series of living, breathing pictures that show the great danger to society caused by the lazy, dissipated wife.

Comedy showing "There He Goes."
