weather Wednesday, set to holding the political election which is being for the opening of the Democratic national convention next Tuesday. Other events Wednesday were:

The development of an increasing aversion on the part of newly arriving Meadon men to join his fight for abrogation of the two-thirds rule.

A declaration by Governor Smith's backers that if imposition of the majority rule were attempted, a counter attack would be launched against the state unit rule, by which many of the Meadon delegates are bound.

Indications that Bennett, leader of Democrats in Illinois, whom Meadon men credit with having started the movement to put the convention centering on the majority rule, are breaking the custom of voting certain state delegations as units.

New Headquarters Opened. Establishment of headquarters for Oscar Underwood and John W. Davis, candidates for the presidency, and of George L. Berry, vice-presidential aspirant.

Allocation of the Abolitionists positions on the floor of Madison Square Garden and detailed completion of arrangements within the great auditorium.

Announcement of United States Senator Copeland, who heretofore has been looked upon as a potential "dark horse" candidate for the presidential nomination, that after a tour of New England, where he received a "grand reception," he was "all for Smith."

General agreement among members of the national committee, nearly all of whom are on the scene, that Senator Walsh of Montana would be awarded the permanent convention chairmanship "because of the great service he has just done the country and the party through his activities at Washington."

The last onerous job of the delegations seating subcommittee, headed by Isador Dockweiler of California, was completed after hours of discussion and a long session at Madison Square Garden at which virtually every delegate and party worker in town appeared to plead for choice places for his state or territorial standard.

McADOO MAKES ISSUE CLEAR BY STATEMENT

NEW YORK (AP)—William G. McAdoo, in a formal statement issued Wednesday night, forecast victory for the Democratic party through the progressive forces within the party. He said that throughout the country there was a demand that the Democrats should commit themselves unequivocally to constructive reforms. "There are certain things," Mr. McAdoo said in part, "which the Democratic party must fight for uncompromisingly: international co-operation for the purpose of abolishing war and thus maintaining peace; cutting down or elimination of excessive military and naval armaments and the restoration of world wide economic improvement, broadening the basis of prosperity among our own people so that as far as possible parity shall be restored between the cost to the farmer of the things he consumes and the price he obtains for the things he sells. "As essential steps in this direction, the tariff must be recon-

SEVEN VOTES ELECT ANTLES

School Election at Cove Was Close with Two Candidates Receiving Strong Support.

COVE (Special)—At the annual school meeting in Cove, A. A. Antles was re-elected as director. This is the beginning of the twelfth year Mr. Antles has served on the board of directors for Cove. The election was closely contested by Mrs. E. H. Bell, the result standing 57 to 59 with a few scattered votes. Miss Ross Kelly was elected to the position of district clerk. Mrs. Jean Taylor running close second. School budget as prepared by the directors was allowed.

The strawberry festival and lawn fête, under the auspices of the chamber of commerce was a decided success. The showers in the afternoon slightly dimmed the splendor of the hosts, but the crowds disappeared and the evening was one of pleasure to the 200 guests. Many La Grande and Union people were present adding greatly to the success of the festival.

The young people who have returned from the various colleges to spend their vacation at home are: Misses Lola Martin, Violet Bloom, Nellie Barlowe and Vina Cooley, from Monticello; Novy Selak, R. and E. Priddy, Eugene Grant and Merrill Colley, from Willman and Truman Pease, who has been teaching school in Wasco county.

strusted downward and the railroads must be reformed so as to provide adequate and efficient service at lower rates. Foreign trade must be re-established and widened; the natural resources of the nation must be protected, particularly water power, which must be developed in the interest of the people and not exploited for private advantage. Child labor should be protected and quality of rights, civil, economic and social should be secured to women.

"Genuine economy in government must be practiced and taxes must be progressively reduced to the lowest possible basis consistent with efficient government and justice to deserving employees in the public service. Justice for labor, the farmer and the people must be substituted for the policy of advantage to predatory interests constantly practiced by this administration."

U. S. STAND ON MATTER MADE CLEAR

It is cordial and friendly in tone, but at the same time makes it clear that the exclusion provision in no way transgresses upon any written or implied obligations on the part of the United States. Secretary Hughes points out that the congress wholly within its right in the enactment of the provision and that action taken "is mandatory upon the executive branch of the government and allows no latitude for the exercise of executive discretion as to the carrying out of the legislative will expressed in the statute."

The construction generally placed upon the American note is that it conclusively demonstrates the view of the Washington government that the exclusion law is a closed incident and that no attempt to modify or alter its terms is to be expected.

Secretary Hughes in the note which he prepared with utmost care, expresses pleasure over the friendly and cordial character of the present communication delivered to him by Ambassador Hantani May 21.

"You may be assured of the readiness of this government to consider in the same spirit the views you have set forth," Mr. Hughes adds.

The note then analyzes the exclusion provision applicable to all aliens ineligible for citizenship as it is modified by an exception contained in the act and points out:

"It will be observed that taking these exceptions into account, the provision in question does not differ greatly in its practical operation or in the policy which it reflects, from the understanding embodied in the gentlemen's agreement, under which the Japanese has cooperated with the government of the United States in preventing the emigration of Japanese laborers to this country."

Cooperation Appreciated. Appreciation of this cooperation in carrying out a "long-established policy" is expressed and the communication adds:

"Indeed the appropriateness of that policy, which has not evidenced any lack of esteem for the Japanese people, their character and achievements have been confirmed rather than questioned by the voluntary action of your government in aiding its execution."

"The substantial difference between the exclusion provisions and the gentlemen's agreement, the note continues, lies in that President Coolidge described in his statement at the time he signed the immigration bill, as the "termination of congress to exercise its prerogative in defining by legislation the control of immigration instead of leaving it to international arrangements."

"It is not understood that this prerogative is called in question, but rather your government expressly recognized that it lies within the inherent sovereign power of each state to limit and control immigration to its own conditions, an authority which it is believed the Japanese government has not failed to exercise in its own discretion with respect to the admission of aliens and the conditions and limitations of their citizenship within its borders." Secretary Hughes' note continues: "It is at this point, the secretary, after noting that the president would have preferred to continue the existing arrangement with Japan with such modifications as seemed desirable, asserts: "This government does not feel that it is limited to such an international arrangement or that by virtue of the existing understanding (the gentlemen's agreement) or of the negotiations it has conducted in the past with the Japanese government that it has in any sense lost or impaired the full liberty of action which it would otherwise have in this matter. On the contrary, that freedom with respect to the control of immigration, which is an essential element of sovereignty and entirely compatible with the friendly sentiments which animate our international relations, this government in the course of these negotiations always fully reserved."

Reviews History. The note then quotes the clause from Article II of the commercial treaty of 1854 with Japan which restricted such immigration to the extent of the right to control "the immigration of laborers" by law. It adds that when the new commercial treaty of 1911 was under negotiation this clause was eliminated at the instance of the Japanese government because of the existence of the gentlemen's agreement of 1907-8 by which Japan undertook, on her own motion, to restrict such immigration to the United States. Reference also is made to memoranda exchanged between the Japanese embassy and the state department dated October 15, 1910, and January 27, 1911, in which the state department acquiesced in the Japanese suggestion for elimination of the clause under discussion but with the stipulation that "the government should do all that was within all necessary power and without prejudice to the inherent sovereign right of either country to limit and control immigration to its own domains or possessions."

On February 8, 1911, the embassy replied in a memorandum which stated that "the imperial government concurred in the understanding of the proposal relating to the question of immigration set forth in the above mentioned note of January 23 last."

Secretary Hughes' note points out that this correspondence constituted a "distinct understanding" between the two governments of the right of each to control immigration and adds that the advisability of dealing with the question of legislative enactment "necessarily remains within the legislative branch of this government to determine" a power which congress has now exercised.

The note advises the Japanese government that since the exclusion provision takes effect July 1, 1924, the Washington government must consider the government of Japan as released from any further obligation under the gentlemen's agreement as from that date. It concludes with the assertion that recognition of the right of each government to legislate in control of immigration "should not derogate in any degree from the natural good will and cordial friendship which have always characterized the relations of the two countries."

Visitors Inspect Union and Wallowa Counties On All-Day Auto Trip

ing to Hot Lake first where the sanatorium was inspected. Colonel Paville passed judgment on Mr. Thy's herd of Holsteins and that judgment was not derogatory to claims of excellence attached to the Thymers' farm's inhabitants. A driving party accompanied the motorists as far as Union where the party visited the state experimental farm managed by Robert Whitecombe, who takes more pride in the section devoted to solving farmers' problems than a hen does in her first flock of chickens.

Success Pointed Out. The visitors went through the experimental "show-house" where the displays were kept. The introduction of Grimm alfalfa into Oregon was accomplished by the Union farm and other trials, including experimental crops of oats, head lettuce, etc. are being worked out at the present time. The party before leaving, said that the Union farm is the best of the Oregon sub-stations.

A brief stop was made at the Union hotel before continuing on to Cove where the cherry orchards were viewed as the car wound their way along the foothill road going out of Cove. The excellent shipping value of the Cove cherries and other features of the fruit that make them among the best of the world products, were given by Chris Staehland, who accompanied the party for a mile or so. A big failure is predicted for 1925. In small fruits, "strawberries in general there appear to be above the valley average this year."

After leaving Cove the course went on to the state highway near Alect and no stop was made then until reaching the Wallowa canyon, where all looked upon the Minam and the grandeur of the mountains forming the canyon's sidewalls.

Tire Trouble. Another stop occurred near the Staehland camp a few miles on due to a blowout. The party rested for awhile while Mr. Perkins drove on to Wallowa for help. Owing to the fact that it was impossible to secure a new tire for the Perkins and those it was left at Wallowa and the party doubled up in the Lincoln and Franklin until they reached the lake.

The visitors made a point, however, of stopping in Wallowa, Enterprise and Joseph to exchange greetings with the editors of the Wallowa county newspapers.

Appetite Served. Finally the lake was reached about 2 o'clock and a delightful luncheon, prepared by J. Ross Leonard's efficient caterers, was served in the old resort restaurant. All did justice to the repast for with appetites sharpened by the delay in arrival, clam chowder, beef and cantaloupe in a mode disappeared in modifying fashion.

When the afternoon of each one had been satisfied, a trip through the resort was made, with resultant explanations of what the Wallowa Wonderland had to offer the tourist. Yesterday, with fresh snow on the peaks adjacent to the body of water, the surroundings were especially glorious.

The lake, itself, is slightly lower this year than usual.

Business Closed. According to Mr. Leslie, the tourists have been visiting the lake in plentiful numbers. Three New York cars have been registered and scores from other states stopped off for a few days. At the present time, owing to the rainfall of the past few days, few are at the lake. The remaining or clear weather, however, will again give impetus to the tourist trek to Eastern Oregon's Switzerland.

Before returning to Joseph the party visited the three-year-old hatch which is kept at the resort and fed him sugared water, cherries and cigars, which were relished by Mr. Bruin.

Several new cabins and tents have been erected for the accommodation of the summer crop of visitors and developments have made sure a better service than in past years.

At Joseph the Portland committee for the La Grande who continued on to home, arriving here about 7:15 o'clock.

Guests at Joseph

Last night the Land Settlement board members were guests of the Joseph Community club. Today they are to arrive in Pendleton before returning to Portland.

Those who made up the personnel of the party yesterday were Whitney L. Boise, Portland attorney, also a director of the state chamber of commerce; E. E. Pu-ville, editor of the Western Farmer and chairman of the Portland chamber of commerce agricultural committee; A. S. Edmonds, traffic manager of the Union Pacific system; Marshall Dana, associate editor of the Portland Journal; John Daly, president of the Hibernia bank of Portland; Howard Elliot, editor of the Union Pacific magazine; Roy T. Hobog, director of the state chamber of commerce and trustee of the $200,000 Oregon development fund; President and Mrs. Elmer Steadward and daughter, of the Union County chamber of commerce; Earl C. Reynolds, secretary of the same order; H. E. Watkins, chief scout of the Trailmen; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Perkins; Audmer Playle and the writer.

calls at Wednesday's session were therefore confined to a call of states.

Committees on platforms and resolutions and on nominations were also named, and while waiting for these bodies to get through their work the convention listened to oratory.

Immediate launching of a new craft to all the political seas was the burden of all speeches, and cheers of approval greeted each reference to this.

Attack on "Capitalistic Press." Attacks on the "capitalistic press" and more or less thinly veiled criticism of Senator La Follette and the Cleveland conference of July 4, also found favor with the delegates. The comparison between "red" and "yellow," which Duane McDonald introduced Tuesday in his discussion of La Follette, was taken up by several of Wednesday's speakers and greeted cheerfully.

"I am not afraid of red, but I am afraid of a man with a head stuck out of yellow in his back," said the Rev. J. J. Hoche of Ocala.

"If our forefathers had designed the American flag under present economic conditions, the red streaks would be yellow," said Charles E. Taylor, chairman of the convention.
