Headlights Too Bright

E. M. Baker, manager of the J. C. Penney store at Enterprise was forced off the highway near Hilliard by the glaring headlights of a car going in the opposite direction. Mr. Baker and his family were on their way to Pendleton when the bright lights of the approaching car compelled them to pull up to the side of the road to stop. The bank gave way just as the car came to a standstill and the machine rolled over. None of the occupants of the car were injured but considerable damage was consent senator took a slap both at the Republican and Democratic parties, declaring they had failed the people.

CLEVELAND CONVENTION IS OPENED

He declared the time ripe for a militant political movement independent of the old parties and responsive to the needs of the common people.

The necessity for an independent progressive movement lies in the failure of the two old parties to purge themselves of the elements that betray the people. Both are under the power of corrupt wealth.

Johnston's keynote address.

CLEVELAND, O. (By the Associated Press).—Extolling Senator Robert M. La Follette after ridiculing the Republican party, scolding the democratic organization and fiercely denouncing communists, William H. Johnston, head of the Machinists' International union and chairman of the National Progressive Political Action Committee, struck the keynote of the convention of the latter organization, at its opening here. Independence in politics rather than a "third-party" movement, was emphasized as expedient.

Senator La Follette was hailed as "the tribune of the American people," their greatest spokesman and their most loyal defender.

The recent republican national convention was referred to as a "lifeless gathering of political puppets," the democratic convention as a "disorderly mob meeting which responded to burs central quite obediently in its voting."

Representative 5,000,000.

Mr. Johnston asserted the present convention represents five million citizens and that its programme was broad enough to include the best interests of wage earners, farmers, salaried employees, professional men and "independent" bankers, manufacturers and merchants.

He said in part: "We have gathered on this 148th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence for action to secure those rights for which the fathers were struggling to establish a political freedom. Today the people of the United States are engaged in a contest to achieve for themselves and their children the equally great blessings of economic freedom."

"There is no economic freedom, no equality of economic opportunity, in the United States today for any great group of its common people.

American farmers see their property wantonly defrauded by financial conspiracy and find themselves obliged to sell their products in a world market, while the trusts and monopolies from which they must buy are artificially protected by the highest tariff wall in American history.

"The employees of the steel trust, the copper trust, the woolen trust and the hundreds of other great combinations must accept employment on such terms as Gary, Ryan, Wood and the other industrial magnates offer, or risk unemployment and starvation.

"The independent manufacturer must buy and sell in a trust-controlled market and is suffered to exist only on condition that he does not engage in active and effective competition.

"The small merchant finds his wholesale and retail prices fixed by trusts and combinations, while he, himself, is being slowly but surely forced out of business.

"The independent banker is permitted to participate in the sale of bonds and the financing of new enterprises only by the grace of the great banking syndicates, while he already sees his early extinction by relentless competition from the branches of the great centralized financial institutions.

All in Same Boat.

"We may not know it, but we are all in the same boat."

Mr. Johnston recited the history of the progressive movement, pointing to political victories in the congressional elections of 1922 and the fact that the progressives held the balance of power in the last session of congress as proof that it was wise not to launch a third party in 1924.

"In mobilizing our army of progress," he stated, "it has been necessary to be forever vigilant against traitors. So far we have successfully excluded hoodlums, bosses, exploiters, profiteers and prejudice blinded fanatics. We have also kept out those communistic tools of reaction who, masking as federated farmer-laborites, trade union educational leaders, or under even more attractive designations, are constantly striving to destroy the American labor movement and create chaos in the ranks of the progressive."

Mr. Johnston said the republicans "with appropriate stupidity," had nominated two reactionaries on "a platform of meaningless platitudes."

He asserted the democratic party had again proved the fitness of its emblem, the plow and sheaf, by straddling its platform on such questions as child labor, league of nations and the Ku Klux Klan and added that both major parties had consistently broken their platform pledges when in power.

The chairman denounced the federal reserve system order in 1920 restricting loans for carrying crops. He said it forced farmers to throw all accumulated produce upon the market and caused great price smashing.

"It was shrewdly calculated," he said, "that the prostrate farmers would demand that labor also be hampered down into poverty and helplessness, but among the great mass of farmers a different reaction was produced. They saw that industrial workers and farmers had one common set of enemies."

Ready For Action.

Mr. Johnston declared the time ripe for national action.

"We do not lack strength, we do not lack organization, and above all, we do not lack leadership," he said.

"We have a leader—that life-long, faithful servant of the people, whose character, ability and record as a constructive statesman entitle him to take his place with Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln."

His name is already on your lips, his service in your hearts, his vision in your souls—Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin.

"We need not ask him for pledges or promises. His entire life is a pledge of service to the highest ideals and the loftiest aspirations of genuine democracy."

He has been tried in all the fire tests of adversity, and he has emerged with his integrity and his courage unimpaired and undimmed."

Mr. Johnston extolled Senator La Follette as a force for international peace, declaring he would be trusted by "the progressive forces that now control France and England."

DEMOCRATIC DELEGATES ARE WEARY

process of elimination to continue until five remained in the field, withdrawals to be effective for the current day only.

McAdoo forces were backing the resolutions for eliminating the favorite sons but in the meantime Smith forces were conferring with favorite sons' leaders in an effort to agree on a candidate.

Unanimous consent was sought for consideration of the Roman resolution but was refused. McAdoo and Smith people seemed to believe that if the favorite sons were eliminated the time would come when McAdoo and Smith would face each other alone and vote any nomination.

Another Method Up.

The move to organize a steering committee with a member from each delegation, to settle the deadlock, was undertaken this morning. The Missouri and Arkansas delegates conferred with Governor Brennan, Illinois leader, suggesting that committee as the way to settle the deadlock.

Franklin D. Roosevelt and Norman Laek, leaders of the Smith candidacy, called a general conference of all managers of favorite sons candidates.

End in Sight.

Governor Brandon, of Alabama, said when he left the conference he believed the ticket would be made up soon.

A resolution for adjournment to Kansas City July 21st, was at first greeted with laughter, but developed evidence of serious support. It was put to a vote but failed to receive a majority.

JULY FOURTH RESULTS IN NO NOMINEE

Smith supporters shouted to the chairman that the convention had "insulted" their candidate once, and it was late now to smooth over the incident.

Nevertheless the leaders of the groups which are outside both the McAdoo and Smith camps believed they might be able to convince the convention Saturday that further balloting would be futile under the present conditions and reach an agreement on a compromise nominee.

Seventeenth ballot: McAdoo 5284; Smith, 3341; Davis of West Virginia, 67; Underwood, 273; Glass, 25; Robinson, 21; Ritchie, 161; Saulsbury, 6; Owen, 2; Baker, 54; Bryan, 2; 1 absent. Total, 1037.

BIG SUM FOR DEVELOPMENT

Chicago to Spend $2,679,000 in Completing Improvement Projects.

CHICAGO, Ill. (AP).—Projects which will entail an expenditure of approximately $2,679,000,000, in various stages of development for the beautification, utility, health, commercial and industrial progress of Chicago, according to the Chicago Chamber of Commerce.

Projects under way, or soon to be, total $1,374,587,000, a sum many times while those in the preliminary stage will cost $1,255,100,000. The latter include the various terminal propositions, municipal purchase of the surface and elevated lines, construction of a subway and proposed new postoffice and federal building.

Widening, opening and extending numerous streets and boulevards, new bridges, sewage plants, new buildings, hotels, and stores, the union station and Illinois Central project, and telephone improvements are among the activities now under way.

The cost of the projects the chamber is pointed to would equal in value all the farm property of the state of Wisconsin.

Nine major projects of the Chicago Plan Commission are yet to be completed, dealing chiefly with street and boulevard revisions. A continuous lake front development extending from Jackson Park on the far south side to the Chicago river near downtown, is pointed to as a "civic marvel."

Utilization of the "air rights" over several hundred acres of railroad tracks in the heart of the city represents a $195,000,000 project. Transportation extension as outlined involves an expenditure of $589,942,000.

Railway terminal solution is forecast by the association in plans which call for $118,000,000 to be spent. Seven new hotels are valued at $34,000,000. Educational institutions have a program with a total of $54,500,000; reconstruction of the Fine Arts building, erection of the Stadium, Shedd Aquarium and prospective Zoological park, $105,000,000; clubhouses, $47,000,000; public utilities, $73,250,000; sewage treatment works, $125,000,000; and $200,000,000 worth of minor building.

Upwards of 100 major projects are itemized and the status given in the report of the association.

ALVEY ADEE IS DEAD IN WASHINGTON

rious specimens and photographing ancient castles and ruins.

Mr. Adee was born in Astoria, N. Y., November 27, 1842. Suffering from impaired hearing from his birth, a limitation he overcame as to make his subsequent great intellectual development the more remarkable, he received his education from private tutors. At an early age he showed an aptitude for modern languages, which he further developed by a long pedestrian tour through Europe in 1867.

In 1899 he received from Yale the degree of master of arts. He studied civil engineering with his uncle until 1869 when, at the invitation of General E. S. Sikes, then Minister to Madrid, he accompanied him in a nominal capacity of private secretary in order to enjoy a brief sojourn in Spain. Thus he was associated with John Hay, at that time Secretary of the Madrid Legation, and upon Mr. Hay's retirement in 1870 Mr. Adee became regularly attached to the diplomatic service as his successor. He remained at Madrid seven years covering a memorable period of Spanish history, from the downfall of Queen Isabel, to the final restoration under Alfonso XII. During this time he took an active part in the settlement of the Venezuelan controversy which evaded a threatened war with Spain.

Transferred to America.

In 1877, owing to impaired health Mr. Adee was transferred from Madrid to the department of state where, after a few months of preliminary service, he was promoted to Chief of the Diplomatic Bureau. In 1882 President Arthur appointed him Third Assistant Secretary of State. He was present at the signing of the peace protocols between the United States and Spain in 1898 and was appointed Secretary of State ad interim, from September 17 to 29 of that year. He also was temporarily in charge of the department during the critical period of the Chinese Boxer outbreak in 1900 and in 1904 and 1905 during the Russo-Japanese War and the peace negotiations.

While acting in the same capacity in 1907 he was actively concerned in the bringing about a Central American peace conference. He never married.

classes at the Elgin fair. A similar prize which he gave last year was won by Sam L. Knight of this district. In addition to offering a prize at the Elgin event, Dr. Phy yearly gives a valuable bull at the Union stock show.

The 1924 Elgin fair prize is perhaps the most valuable animal in Dr. Phy's herd. His sire is Carnation King Fobes, whose sire in turn was Carnation King Mador, the $20,000 Phymore bull which died a year ago. The dam of the prize calf is Hazelwood Josephine Korndyke. She is the cow, which, at the Union stock show, was judged against and defeated the animal owned by E. F. Bailey of Baker. Bailey's cow had been declared second to the world's champion cow, Tillamook Dobby.

Hazelwood Josephine Korndyke is more than a good show cow. She is a good producer, as records just issued by the Holstein-Friesian association prove. Her yearly production of 2113.4 pounds of milk and 223.6 of butter place Korndyke in the class of leading producers in the nation.

Many of the latter are above school age, he said, but nevertheless he insisted they be given the opportunity to read and write the English language that they "may come into more direct contact with the ideals and standards of our political social life."

Urges Better Rural Schools.

Greater attention to rural schools also was urged by the president. Recalling his attendance at an "old one room country school," he argued that these institutions must give way to the consolidated school "with a modern building and an adequate teaching force commensurate with the best advantages that are provided for our urban population."

Later in the day he planned to board the presidential yacht Mayflower, for a cruise down the Potomac, which might continue over the week end. There were no White House guests, although the two sons of the president and Mrs. Coolidge, John and Calvin, Jr., were at home.

WASHINGTON (AP).—President Coolidge celebrated a double birthday Friday—his fifty-second and the nation's one hundred and forty-eighth.

Following custom, the president made no unusual observance of his birthday, but joined with the nation in the Fourth of July celebration. Friday morning he spoke before the convention of the National Education association.

Later in the day he planned to board the presidential yacht Mayflower, for a cruise down the Potomac, which might continue over the week end. There were no White House guests,
