Bavarian Farmers Fear Peasant Communists, MUNICH, Germany, (AP)—The peasants of Germany are threatening to revolt. It is no fair, they assert, being a farmer in this country where there are so many rich ones of one kind or another to buy nothing of the high cost of living.

At a meeting of the Bavarian Christian Farmers' Union the situation confronting the small land owners, as brought about mainly by the attitude of the government, was discussed for two entire days.

Dr. Schmittmayer, the general secretary of the union, and a dirt farmer himself, called attention to the precarious conditions with which peasants have to contend, and said that there was not only the danger of communistic fanaticism in the background, but also a metal revolution in the air. Taxes were especially onerous, and altogether too high, he said.

In the present policy of the Berlin government conditions for another seven or eight months the danger will be acute indeed, asserted Dr. Schmittmayer. Granting credits to the farmer on the one hand and imposing exorbitant taxes on the other, would in the end lead to an explosion in the farmer's revolution, declared the secretary, and most of the union members nodded their approval.

Mohammedan Rites Used by Gypsies

KONJAVITSA, Bulgaria, (By the Associated Press)—The gypsy tribes throughout Bulgaria held their annual convention here the other day. To the question: "What is the religion of the gypsies," they replied by holding Mohammedan services for their soldiers fallen during the wars according to the Mohammedan rite, under the ministrations of Berish Arad Baba, a gypsy priest who came from Constantinople for the occasion.

There was a swarm of trousered women and girls, dressed in bright colors, and the men wore unbrothered woolen clothes, made of home spun. Most of the gypsies are blacksmiths, blacksmiths or horse dealers. One of the tribal ceremonies carried out was the taking of the oath of fealty by the numerous apprentices, who kissed their masters' hands in token of obedience.

Another feature of the ceremonies was the holding of a traditional observance. This chief held up a loaf of bread before his person and asked the tribesmen: "Can you see me?" "Yes a little," the tribesmen responded. "Well, here's hoping that next year the loaf will be so large that you will not be able to see me at all," the chief answered.

The main entertainment after the feast was dancing by the girls and women, each dancing separately, to the beat of tambourine by the men.
