LINE TO TAP THE FRONTIER

PORTLAND, Ore. (Special) — Oregon's last frontier in passing. When the new railroad line into the isolated Western yellow pine region of the Blue mountains of Grant and Harney counties is completed, it will be no more. James W. Grant, former member of the district forest service, who is in general charge of development work in this "frontier" section of the state, came into Portland yesterday with glowing accounts of the dramatic changes which are taking place.

Eight Townships Closed

PENDLETON, Ore. — Eight townships of timber land in the Umatilla and Whitman national forests are closed areas on account of fire hazard and will not be open when the deer season begins September 1, according to a statement at the district supervisor's office. The land in southeastern of Ukiah and is a means every year for hunters from several counties.

PENDLETON HAS RODEO

PENDLETON, Ore. — A miniature rodeo was staged at the Round-up grounds for George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher, and members of a party of friends with him.

Anita Stanich, an Oregon girl who recently participated in the Tex Austin rodeo near London, stayed on her mount in an exhibition ride, but she had to grab the saddle horn. Kenneth Dewey, champion rider at the Ukiah show in July, stayed on his horse and made a ride, but another cowboy got a dust bath. Two years ago Mr. Putnam headed a group of writers and artists of national fame who came to the local show.

In six days any ordinary woman will dare to go bare headed and let the world know it's bobbed.
