La Grande Theatres

Famous Stadium Used In Making La Plante Play.

The nationally known stadium in Pasadena, California, "city of millionaires," where all the big football games between east and west are staged, was the scene where a pigskin fracas was recently filmed. This is one of the main incidents in "The Dangerous Blonde," Laura La Plante's Universal stellar feature, to be shown at the Arcade Theatre Thursday only.

Gus Henderson, coach of the University of Southern California team, furnished his entire football aggregation, and a large part of the college membership for the scenes. The team was put through practice with Edward Hearn, impersonating a football hero. He played fullback in one rough "take" after another. He had been several years since Hearn played on the gridiron.

When the "game" was over, after a couple of days of constant "shooting," both the team players and the grease paint participants were weary. For two weeks Hearn carried aches and pains which testified to the effort of putting the human body through two full days of football. In the story, written by Mabel Footner, Miss La Plante is a college girl. College atmosphere is really only a small portion of the picture, but Director Hill believed in getting the "real thing," especially in the gridiron atmosphere.

A two-reel comedy will also be shown.

Mix Hits the Mark As the "Trouble Shooter."

If you want to watch Tom Mix hit the mark see him in "The Trouble Shooter," the new Fox picture in which the western star is playing at the Star today, Tuesday and Friday. He rides that dare-devil little horse, Tony, across a swaying trestle with a speeding locomotive coming up behind him. He takes the heavy animal through a mountain storm on "horse snowshoes." Never heard of them? Well, Mix invented them and Tony wears 'em.

The story of "The Trouble Shooter" was written by Fredrick and Fanny Hatton, after a searching study of the lives and duties of western firemen employed by the power companies which string wires through the mountains and the desert wastes. Working with Mix in the cast are Kathleen Key, Earl Fox, J. Gunnis Davis, Howard Truesdale, Frank Currier, Mike Donlin, the former big league ball player, Dolores Rousseau, Charles McHugh and Al Prescott. The picture was directed by John Conway and Mix never appeared to better advantage in any part in his spectacular career.

In every scene Mix and his colleague hit the mark. Spectacular daring, a good story, romance, action and pathos, mingle in a picture which sets a new standard.

"The Covered Wagon" A Picture of Life On the Prairies.

The old days so famous for adventure and down in history as the days of the birth of the American nation, have been turned back and are with us again in "The Covered Wagon," James Cruze's latest Paramount production which will be shown at the Arcade theatre, starting Monday. The great stretch of the western plains forms a most magnificent background, and five hundred or more covered wagons of "prairie schooners," add greatness to this colossal picture. True, it is a love story, but this one is different. It is a love tale of the desert wastes long and enduring with its thrilling climax, leading to the reunion of the young couple, played by Louis Wilson and J. Warren Kerrigan, in a frontier homestead in Oregon. "The Covered Wagon" eclipses anything in pictures.

Dick Hatton Showing at Sherrys Today Only.

People who are tired of westerns in which the hero makes the redskin bite the dust and kills 10 men with a six-shot revolver, will find a refreshing change in "The Seventh Sheriff," starring Dick Hatton and Neva Gerber, which comes to the Sherry's theatre today only. This is a modern western story in which the hero tricks his adversaries into a precarious position, and then laughingly hands them over to the jail. It is much easier to do this when the character is one living at the present time. "The Seventh Sheriff" is a new style western, a thrill picture, with a real drama developed upon an interesting and unusual theme. Its dramatic moments are contrasted with natural and effective comedy relief. It is something different.
