DURKEE BULL HITS HUNTERS

BAKER, Ore. (Special)—Two fabled pheasant hunters met with a thrilling experience while hunting on the Mount Moore place near Durkee. H. C. Rippey and J. P. Warren had accepted an invitation to hunt "chinks" at the Moore ranch and were in the act of stealing upon a covey of birds when a bull became enraged at the actions of the hunters and charged down upon them, hitting Mr. Rippey first, then taking after Mr. Warren. Both gentlemen were knocked down and taking deliberate aim fired upon the bull but this only enraged the animal more and a general assault was made. The bull evidently believed his sufficient damage had been done suddenly turned and stampeded away. Besides several severe bruises Mr. Rippey received two fractured ribs and Mr. Warren's jawbone rib broken. Both gentlemen are reported to be resting easily today and consider themselves very fortunate to be alive.

The bull, it is understood, is owned by Mr. Hudman and it is thought it was so badly injured by shot that it will have to be killed.

gasoline and crude oil are selling at very low prices at this time. Reductions have been the rule with all companies from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Considering the large amounts of oil, both crude and refined, used every day it is quite remarkable that the market has broken so sharply. Since everyone is interested in a war of petroleum products or an investor in oil securities Roger W. Babson's analysis of the industry, issued today, is of more than passing interest.

"When John D. Rockefeller received a message that the United States supreme court had dissolved the Standard Oil company," says Mr. Babson, "it is reported that he made this statement, 'Ninety half a century in the oil business has taught me that it is profitable only as it is controlled. Oil companies may sell oil by cutting prices but such warfare does not yield profit. I am through with the oil business. From that day to this it is said he has never stepped his foot in the door of 28 Broadway. Although the price of oil recently went up considerably after this supreme court decision and although the various oil company stocks sold in total for more than the old company stock had ever sold, yet the senior Mr. Rockefeller never changed his opinion. He was through with the oil business and devoted himself to golf. Things did not seem to work out as he had predicted for some years but his forecast is now coming true because the competition between oil companies has become so keen as to be practically ruinous. In some localities the men to put up filling stations has become almost humorous. One local estate man at least has suggested the following rhyme for every corner don't you cry you'll be a filling station by and by."

Keen Competition. "This competition has become so keen that there is real rivalry between the Standard Oil company and the other oil companies. It is said that the president of one is hardly on speaking terms with the president of another and that competition is even keener between some of the Standard Oil companies than between the Standards of New Jersey and some of the independent companies. Mr. W. L. Mellon, president of the Gulf, is often seen at the head office of the Standard Oil in New York City while officials of several of the other Standard companies have not been seen there for months. Some believe that this apparent antagonism is purposely arranged in order to lead the government to think that there is no collusion between the individual Standard Oil companies, but such evidence as I have does not justify electing affiliates which packed the La Follette nomination. It is his hope that he goes back to the senate, for the sake of my country."

Assails Independents.—

Amidst Senator La Follette's candidacy, the Republican nominee described it as "the first mobilization in the history of our country of the forces of extreme radicalism behind aggressive leadership."

He accused the La Follette movement leaders of attempting "to suit political ends" on the declaration in their platform for congressional review of supreme court decisions, and added:

"But that declaration is there just the same, and if it was not there, these leaders would not have obtained the support of the socialists in this campaign."

Mr. Dawes' address was the fourth of the day in Wyoming, the first Rocky mountain state he has visited in his campaign. Today he will swing through Nebraska with several other platform speakers, beginning at Grand Island and ending with a night address in Omaha.

DAVIS TAKES DAY OFF—NEW YORK (AP)—John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for the presidency, returned here Thursday from a three-day trip through upper and western New York, the results of which he declared to be "highly pleasing and heartening."

The candidate went to his hotel headquarters for a brief visit and left the city a short while later for his home in Larchmont valley to rest and prepare for his second division of the middle west scheduled to begin with his departure from here Friday evening for Indiana. If the hours of the registration permit, Mr. Davis said, he would return Friday in order to read his vote on November 4 for the state and national Democratic tickets.

WHETHER PLAYS G. O. P.—SACRAMENTO, CAL. (AP)—In traveling 100 miles over motor roads Thursday, Senator Wheeler, independent vice presidential candidate, got in two full length addresses Thursday before California audiences. The first was at Stockton and the second in Sacramento. In both he stressed his claims of corruption in Republican conduct of national affairs and repeated his account of bank transactions in Massachusetts state funds when Coolidge was governor.

"Always the defense of Republicanism," he said.

"I do not say that the oil industry has turned the corner nor that prices will not be cut still further but it should be recognized that the industry is a stable industry and is fundamentally sound. The present warfare cannot continue indefinitely as I've already shown. The difficulty is not due to overproduction nor lack of demand but rather to the competition between the companies. If the truth were known the oil business misses John D. Rockefeller, senior and is now looking for some other general to take his place. The right man may be one of the present Standard Oil men or it may be Mellon of the Gulf or some other strong independent operator. Those who wait until this man arrives will find that it is late to purchase oil or oil securities at bargain prices. To make a really satisfactory profit, these must be purchased when things look dark as they do at the present time. When the industry straightens out its difficulties and begins to get back on a sound workable basis prices will have gone up again. My analysis of the situation leads me to believe that those who want oil or oil securities should begin to accumulate now and hold try to wait and catch the lowest possible price. It is important, of course, that the right securities be selected. For investment purposes three companies which offer their money in retaining and distributing oil are more satisfactory than those who depend upon drilling for an income. Of the latter class the pure promoters are to be avoided.

OKLAHOMA MUD BUNGS OUT "PUSH"

OKLAHOMA CITY, ORE. (AP)—"Push!" said the governor of Oklahoma to the governor of Oklahoma.

"I'm pushing," was the latter's non-political reply.

Out on the road in mud ankle-deep somewhere between the city and Shawnee, Okla., these words could be overheard early Thursday morning as Governor Bryan, democratic vice presidential candidate, and Governor Trap of this state, put their shoulders to the rear of a big touring automobile bus in a driving rain and helped get it back on the road after it had been ditched in the mud.

Governor Bryan was returning to Oklahoma City from Shawnee, where he had made a speech when the bus slipped into the mud.

soft mud of the side of the road. He and Governor Trap helped seven other male members of the party of 15 to push the big car out and all arrived safely here shortly before 1 o'clock Thursday morning.
