POST SEASON GAMES COMING

Several East-West Football Contests Are to Be Played on Pacific This Year.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP).—At the close of the football season on the Pacific coast at least three East-West games will be played, perhaps more.

On New Year's day the University of California, which has won the championship of the Pacific coast conference for four seasons, will meet the University of Pennsylvania in the new memorial stadium at Berkeley, Cal., which seats 73,000. California started the 1924 season with but four of last year's regulars and faced the task of building a new machine. Coach Amy Smith reported that his team would lose its title and incidentally its reputation of being unbeatable, but sport experts would not concede this, pointing to the wealth of material usually to be found on the Berkeley campus.

On Saturday, Dec. 6, the University of Southern California, always a strong contender for coast football honors, will clash with Syracuse university, in Los Angeles.

Athletic authorities at the University of Washington have announced that their eleven will entertain an eastern team, yet to be announced, in the Washington stadium at Seattle, Nov. 29, the day after Thanksgiving. Last year Washington was the runner-up in the coast title race, defeated only by California.

For several seasons an inter-coastal post-season game has been held in connection with the Tournament of Roses at Pasadena, Calif., and efforts are expected to be made to arrange such a contest this winter. Last New Year's day this attraction brought together the Navy and the University of Washington. The result was a 14-10 tie.

The title race in the coast collegiate conference is likely to be exceptionally close this season. The teams thus far rated most powerful, all of them pointed at the weakened California squad, are Washington, Southern California, and Stanford university. The University of Idaho was the dark horse last season and may make another strong bid for honors.

Southern California will play California at Berkeley and Stanford at Los Angeles, Washington and California meet at Seattle, while the traditional rivalry between California and Stanford is to be settled at Berkeley.

The other conference members who promise to make the fight interesting are the University of Oregon, Oregon Agricultural college, Washington State college and the University of Montana.

Weight Means Nothing

It makes no difference how big or small you are in football. This year's Ohio State team proves that. "Fairy" Pothoff, star guard of the Buckeyes, weighs 270 pounds. Bobby Watts, the center, weighs exactly 14 pounds less. Yet both are of equal value to the team, and rank with the best forwards in the Western Conference.

Washington Is Joy-Mad Over World Series Win

WASHINGTON (By the Associated Press).—Friday night the nation's capital gave itself over to the celebration of its greatest baseball achievement or the greatest any team has ever gained. It was a victory that not only stirred the country's hub, but undoubtedly swept magnificently throughout the land to the crossroads and the homesteads for it seemed the whole nation rooted for "Bucky" Harris and his gallant band and shared Washington's own joy in the triumphant outcome. Never has baseball's premier crown been won under circumstances so remarkable as those Friday afternoon in a series that had swung back and forth with brilliancy, uncertainty and the last thrilling moment.

It is since the famous series of 1912, when American and National league rivals fought with courage and tenacity for the title and only enough it was the Giants who went down to defeat this time as they did 12 years ago before the Boston Red Sox.

McGraw Gets Setback

It was a shattering setback for John McGraw, gray-haired veteran pilot of the Giants, turned back on the threshold of the great goal of his career a fourth world's crown which would have put him beyond all rivals—but it also was a marvelous victory for "Bucky" Harris, black-haired, dynamic young chief of the leadders. Harris, 27 years old, and the youngest manager that ever led a major league team to the top, was a dominant (shining) figure in his team's triumph and gained, through the brilliance of his tactics and their perfect play, a place in baseball that few leaders have ever held.

Harris called his men to their victorious finish when it seemed that disaster would overcome their staunch spirit. Two setbacks to their greatest hurling ace, Walter Johnson, and the loss for the greater part of the series of their veteran shortstop, Roger Peckinpach, might have dented the courage of any but the Senators. By the race of the heavy sort of odds and trailing the National league champions two games to three, Washington came back and before the president and a home crowd, ended the series Thursday and won it Friday.

In the final analysis it was the never-say-die spirit instilled by Harris, the unquenchable "will to victory" that seemed almost a thing of fate that pulled the team through. It was a right from behind for the Senators from start to finish. Always the road to victory was uphill and they overcame many obstacles before finally conquering the peak.

COOLIDGE ENTHUSED OVER SERIES GAMES

WASHINGTON (AP).—President Coolidge, immediately after returning to the White House from the final game of the world series, issued the following statement:

"Of course, I am not speaking as an expert or as a historian of baseball, but I do not recollect a more exciting world's series than that which finished Friday afternoon. The championship was not won until the twelfth inning of the game. This shows how evenly the teams were matched. I have only the heartiest of praise to bestow upon the individual players of both teams.

"Naturally, in Washington, we were pleased to see Walter Johnson finish the game pitching for our home team and make a hit in the last inning that helped win the series. It has to be kept in mind that, though he was not successful in the two games which he pitched, it was his skill that had won the pennant and put Washington into the world's series. Everyone was pleased to see him come back at the close of the last game.

"The three contests which I witnessed maintained throughout a high degree of skill and every evidence of a high-class sportsmanship that will bring to every observer an increased respect and confidence in our national game. It would be difficult to conceive a finer example of true sport."

GIANTS OUTFIELDED AND OUTHIT SENATORS; GOSSIN TIED RECORD

(By the Associated Press.)
The Senators won their first world series despite the fact that they were outfitted and outfielded by their New York opponents. The final average shows that the Giants batted .281 and fielded for a mark of .836 while the Senators hung up a hitting average of .248 and a fielding figure of .864.

Bill Terry, Giant first baseman, was the leading individual hitter with an average of .429 for five games. Roger Peckinpach, crippled here, compiled a mark of .417 for four games and was second on the list but Joe Judge, playing in all seven games, was the real hitting king of the Senators with a .358 mark.

Travis Jackson of the Giants and "Muddy" Ruel of the Senators had the poorest hitting records of any of the regulars, each getting but two hits and having marks of .074 and .055 respectively.

"Goose" Goslin, whose record of three home runs tied the mark established by Ruth last season, was the leading slugger with a total of 21 bases on 11 hits. Harris was close behind with 17, including two homers, while Fritch led the Giants with 15 total bases on 10 hits. Fritch had the most two baggers, four, and he and Terry got the only triples of the series. Sam Rice was the leading base stealer with two thefts.

Although their fielding average was not as good as the Giants the Senators completed 10 double plays against four for their opponents.

Tom Zachary, Washington southpaw, was the only pitcher to win more than one game, while Jack Bentley of the Giants, and Walter Johnson of the Senators, the iron men of the series, each won one and lost two games. Marberry figured in four games, three of which he served in a relief capacity.
