There is a distinct individuality about the J. P. McCarthy production "Out of the Dust." It is stirring and entertaining in quality, has considerably more human interest and less of the spectacular than the old style Western, and should go well with the majority of audiences. Mr. McCarthy received his inspiration for the production from the Frederic Remington picture "King's Dealings" with frontier days.

In addition to the scenes at the fort, such as often have been duplicated, there is an excellent ranch and cowboy flavor to the picture. The old-time dance hall provides atmosphere for the big climax, where Martha Evans' husband gives the villain the beating that he deserves. The fight is a brutal affair, but thoroughly convincing. The picture throughout is well staged.

Little Pat Moore is the beauty spot of the production. The little fellow not only looks well, but acts well, and seems to have a thorough understanding of what is expected of him, despite his tender years. Robert McKim as the villain needs no introduction—he is known as one of the best boulers in the screen. His character, Matthew, is attractive as the old-fashioned woman with attractions of the modern type, and Russell Simpson fits the bill of the deserted husband as faithfully as he does that of the old army officer of the early days.

Comedy, "High Dred Staff."

"The Female," Starring Betty Compson, Coming to Star.

"The Female," a Sam Wood Paramount production, starring Betty Compson and adapted by Agnes Christie Johnston from the popular magazine serial, "Dalla, the Lion Cub," by Cynthia Stocker, opens a three days run tomorrow at the Star Theatre.

Miss Compson in the title role is "the lion cub" because in fancy she was lost in the jungles of South Africa and mothered by a lioness until rescued by her guardian. She meets Colonel Valentia, a young Englishman at a large ball in the grand hotel at Johannesburg, and falls in love with him. He is attracted to her but their friendship is rudely broken when she hears a malicious conversation engineered by an English woman who is in love with Valentia.

She is Betty, the Delta's guardian who is in love with her, proclaims that she marry him and proclaims that she need not be his wife until after she has spent three years in England learning to "be like the Englishers." She accepts and it three years returns as a beautiful cultured, perfectly poised woman of fashion.

Dalla continues to forsake De Beer's (Henry's) advances and goes on a lion hunt engineered by Valentia. They have plumped far into the veldt and have established a camp when De Beer suddenly appears with his native bearers and his faithful old servant. The meeting face to face, De Beer is suspicious, furious, Valentia has tried to smother his love for Dalla and has ignored her shy advances. But De Beer does not know this.

The scenes that follow take place in the African veldt, its mystery and lurking danger on every hand. The entire production builds up to a smashing climax, a fitting closure for one of the finest adventure dramas you've ever seen in your life.

Warner Baxter has the role of Colonel Valentia. Others in the cast are Dorothy Ganning, Preston Wood, Helen Butler, Pauline Powell, Edgar Norton and Florence Wiley.

Vera Reynolds, Movie "Find," Appears in "Feet of Clay."

In his latest Paramount screen offering Cecil B. DeMille of the alluring flavored cinema conceptions has reached in all directions to make "Feet of Clay," which opened at the Arcade Theatre yesterday, strictly 1924.

The heroine, played by the new "find," Vera Reynolds, is the new type to whom the public interest has turned; the flapper, grown from parties and petting at seventeen to marriage and responsibilities at twenty-one.

Of course, there is a wonderful DeMille party, a dance floor laid over a pool with interesting connecting bridges. All of this is preceded by a colorful beach sequence, utilizing a myriad of striking novelties, and featuring an exciting race between twenty girls on surf boards behind fast speedboats.

Mix in a struggling couple in a Harlem flat, a mid-ocean fight between a swimmer and a shark, and it may readily be seen that DeMille is back again in all his old form.

Timeliness and novelty, recording in a careful review of the greatest film successes of the past few years, seem to be the two most infallible ingredients of a photo-

Able Centenarian in Utah Still Practices Medicine

VERNAL, Utah (AP)—This city now claim to one of the oldest, if not the oldest, practicing physician in the United States in the person of Dr. H. C. Hullinger, who will be 100 years of age on December 8, 1924.

Dr. Hullinger maintains an office here. He is a remarkably well preserved man and, despite his advanced age, does not wear glasses and is hale and hearty. He was born in Champaign county, Ohio, 20 years after Ohio was admitted to the Union as a state and in a recent interview attributed his unusual age to "having lived a right-ous life, the practicing of the Golden Rule, and for the past 55 years having taken my own medicine when it was needed."

Dr. Hullinger came to Utah in 1858 and has several children. He has been married three times.

Canada Is England's Granary

LONDON (AP)—The United States is no longer the chief exporter of wheat to the United Kingdom. The farrow supplies now come from the Dominion of Canada, with the United States second and Argentina a close third. It is only in Italy and oats that the United States has retained its hold on English imports; in the case of oats the importations have slightly increased.
