Our Boys

The football game yesterday played by Boise and La Grande high school teams convinced everyone who saw it that La Grande's boys are to be considered when it comes to the game of football. Boise's team had been selected with especial idea as to size, for those Idahoans looked like tall swimmers of the Wabash and each of them had been well fed since the day his eyes were opened to the world. In fact, to be very truthful, they were an aggregation of about as husky a lot for high school boys as one could find in many days' travel. And, too, they had several scalps dangling from their belts, for they have been playing a winning season. That our lads outplayed them throughout and lost the game by one point is a verdict agreed upon by spectators from Boise and La Grande. There is not a thing wrong with La Grande's football team. It is all right, and we are abundantly proud of them and the work they did yesterday.

While They Smile

A dispatch from Paris and direct bearing on the Eastern Oregon sheep industry and we can imagine a fine broad smile spreading over the faces of sheepmen like Fred Falconer, Jay Dobbin, Ed Miller and Miles Lee when they read that Dame Fashion in Paris has decreed that ladies shall wear woolen stockings this winter instead of silk. The reason for this is to so care for the lower extremities in winter time that they may be more attractive next summer when the same Dame Fashion has decreed that sandals and no stockings shall be worn. Of course, it is only the first part of the Paris news dispatch that interests the wool growers of Eastern Oregon, but that does mean that wool will be in even stronger demand than it is at present.

Garratt is Partly Wrong

After reading the Saturday Evening Post story about farming, which was written by Garrett Garratt, we are forced to believe that this able writer produced that story without having had close touch with the agricultural world. He is long on theories and his utterances sound very much like the echo of a college man who sits and thinks but does not rub elbows with those of whom he is writing.

The farm situation has improved lately due to the law of supply and demand, but unless there is a tariff to aid the farmer, and an agency to stabilize marketing the farmer is going to continue as he has been—trusting to luck and a bit-and-miss market.

The McNary-Haugen bill, much as Mr. Garratt dislikes it, should become a law and the government, so long as we have a protective tariff on industry, should exercise the right to stabilize farm products by being able to buy and hold a surplus, selling it into the world market at the best price possible, and thus holding the domestic market in a more even manner.

Saturday Evening Post writers are invited to come out west and do a little farming. It doubtless would change their viewpoint.

Every man is a hero in his own home until the company leaves.

It pays to be good, but even the good dollar often is drawn and quartered.

The earth may be round but that's no reason why we shouldn't try to live on the square.

You can say one thing for football heroes. They have crowded bathing beauties off the sport page.

Most any man can be popular by keeping his opinions to himself.

"Save the surface and you save all," is a famous slogan that could well be applied to the average flapper.

Drunk—Let's go out and have a party.
Temperate One—I am sorry, but I have a case of dyspepsia.
Drunk—Silly, bring it along. I'll drink anything.

What is it mounds the life of man?
The weather.
What makes some black and others tan.
The weather.
What makes the Yohu live in trees.
And Congo natives dress in leaves.
While others go in furs and furs?
The weather.

Correct this sentence: My wife doesn't mind in the least said the food husband, when I go out in the evening and stay out all night playing poker.

It takes money to make the money go, but all a dark horse asks is a split in the party.

A very young doctor, opening a brand-new surgery, waited all day without a visitor until at last a knock came upon some running up the drive.

"Sit down," said the young doctor, smilingly. "What can I do for you?"
"I must get on the telephone—right now," gasped the visitor. "My wife's ill and I want to ring up my doctor."

Press—Let me try on that suit in the window, my good man.
Kee—Sorry, sir, but you'll have to use the dressing room.

Fame is a fickle thing. The man who raises 15-foot corn stalks soon has to give up page one to the mail carrier that makes his entire route despite the worst snow storm of the year.

We need one more law: A law to make people obey laws.

NO TIME TO WASTE
Nurse (announcing arrival of son and heir): "It's a boy, sir."
Engrossed Professor: "Ask him what he wants, my boy."

"Willie," asked the teacher, "what is the plural of 'quay'?"
"Men," answered the small pupil.
"And the plural of 'child'?"
"Wimps," was the prompt reply.

Society women always had to put up a good front to the world, and make the styles of gowns make them put up an extra good back.

The photograph of the slain hero found always makes one wonder how the wife could have been so pale.

The music house wishing to put out a suitable slogan to help keep the sale of recorders might use this: "Ask the Man Who Means One."

BENEFIT
Now those gamblers didn't get it. But she is worth a second look. For when I'm hungry you can't tell me on any, come she can cook.
