"Merton of Movies."

William Beaudine has made it a masterpiece of screen technique. The situations are handled with such subtlety that it is only too easy to make one's self believe that he is watching the performance of two different stars who look alike instead of one who is taking two parts.

The plot of "Merton of Movies" embraces many phases of life, from studies of childhood to the glimmering heights of wealth. We get glimpses of the extremely poor, the extremely rich, and those in moderate circumstances, and there are very few details of human interest that are left out in any of the situations.

"Cornered" is one of the pictures really worth seeing. It has everything to its credit. Don't miss it.

CLAUDE C. PRATT

A good, honest farmer came to place an order with us for building material. As his order called for quite a bunch of nails, he asked that he might see them. I opened a keg and he picked up a handful and said, "These look all right." I said, "They are no different than the nails you always used, but suppose he thought because the price was so remarkably low that they were no good. I never heard of a second grade nail. Every time some one knocks us it fairly stings, adds another customer to our list. At present we are selling large orders in Core and in Union.

Nails, $1.98 base, in keg lots.

Sherry's Showing

"Cornered" for Last Time Tonight.

"Cornered," which was unfurled at the Sherry theater yesterday, was a display of rare talent. It seems as if, instead of suffering the character to the roles, the Warner Bros. had each characteristic written for a particular actor.

Marie Prevost, to whom is given the stellar honors, does some admirable acting in her dual role as Margaret Waring and Mary Brennan, and John Roche, who takes the male lead, must be given credit also for carrying away some of the honors.

Raymond Hatton as Nick, The Duke, and Rockcliffe Folliwain as Jerry, The Gent, are as convincing as the authors of the play meant them to be.

This story was quite a difficult one to be handled because of the dual characterization involved, but Charismatic Suit Trial began.

EUGENE, Ore.—The circuit court case here of the Elison-White Charismatic association against the Eugene Kiwanis club was instituted after testimony had been taken. The Kiwanis in 1922 sponsored the sale of tickets for the charismatic entertainments here and when the week was over it was found that there was a deficit. The association then sued the club for the recovery of the amount of the deficit. The Kiwanis club fought the case on the ground that the attractions were not up to standard.
