A pert little hat of bright colored felt for sports (if its crown is peaked and decked with a tiny bow at the tiptop, it is very, very smart). In fact, any sort to suit your fancy.

SPORT DEATHS MANY IN YEAR

NEW YORK (AP).—The world of sport lost many of its outstanding figures during 1924. Baseball mourned the death of two of the diamond's greatest leaders, Frank Chance, former "Peerless Leader" of the Chicago Cubs and Pat Moran, who piloted Philadelphia and Cincinnati National League clubs to pennants. The Reds suffered a second loss when Jake Daubert, veteran first baseman, died.

Auto racing took an unusually heavy toll, 15 fatalities marking the season. The most prominent were Jimmy Murphy, winner of most of the world's speed classics, and Dario Resta, famous Italian driver and former winner of the 500-mile Indianapolis race. Frankie Jerome, leading contender for the bantamweight boxing title, died in a hospital from the effects of a blow sustained in a fight at Madison Square Garden with Bud Taylor.

Shane at center was high point man for the Buckaroos with 24 markers to his credit while Sager led in the scoring for the annual with 12. ### WALTER CAMP SELECTS TEAM

"Big Three" Losses Out in First Team Choices; Pacific Coast Blacks

NEW YORK (By the Associated Press).—The 1924 all-American football eleven picked by Walter Camp, dean of gridiron authorities, is notable chiefly for the selection of no more than one star from any eleven in the country and its failure to place on the first team any representative of the "big three"—Harvard, Yale and Princeton.

The east's foremost triumvirate, ancient strongholds of the game, is ignored on the first team for the first time in the 35 years Camp's selections have been made.

It marks, too, a climax in the widespread development of playing standards since 1889 and 1890, when Camp picked his first two all-American teams entirely from the squads of the "big three," then dominant in the game, but now forced to yield their ancient supremacy to other and ever-increasing rivals.

Harvard Not Represented.

Harvard is not represented at all in Camp's selections for the first time, the crimson failing to place a man on either the second or third teams which he also picks. Previously Harvard had failed only in the war year of 1918 to have an entry on the first eleven. Yale, although it finished its second straight season without defeat and captured the "big three" crown once more, is recognized only on the second team with Captain Lovejoy at center and Ducky Pond in the backfield.

Princeton is on an even basis in this respect, the Tigers having Boatle at guard and Shute at quarterback on the second-string combination.

Geographically, the 1924 selections are well distributed, for on the first team the east has six representatives, the middle west four and the far west one. Among the 33 stars included in the three combinations the east leads with 16, the middle west had 10, the far west six and the south one.

5 Players Twice Honored.

Three players are recognized on the first team for the second time. They are Harold (Red) Grange, famous Illinois back and outstanding star of the year; Ed Garbisch, Army center, who returns to the post he held in 1923; and Homer Haze, Rutgers, who was picked as an end in 1923 and fullback this season. Haze's shift from the line to the backfield has few parallels. Back in 1910 Bunker of West Point was chosen as a tackle and the following year gained a place as halfback. Walter Eckersall of Chicago was an end on the 1904 eleven, but shifted to quarterback

Vegetables Necessary Even in Winter Meals

Vegetables in winter diet are just as important as vegetables in summer diet, say the O. A. C. Dieticians. Winter vegetables are not so delicate in flavor, but they are healthful and lend variety to every-day meals.

As sources of iron, the leafy vegetables are considered the most important, but the others are also important sources of food iron.

Vegetables when liberally used tend to prevent or correct intestinal putrefaction. The mild laxative tendency of many vegetables depends in part upon the fact that they furnish to the digestive tract a sufficiently bulky residue.

When the cost of food must be strictly limited the diet may often be improved by substituting the expenditure for meats and sweets in order that vegetables may be used more freely.

Vegetables high in iron are spinach, beets, carrots, and tomatoes. In calcium, carrots, onions, bean, beets, cauliflower, tomatoes, celery, spinach, string beans and cabbage. Beans and peas contain the largest percentage of protein of any of the vegetables and are always a cheap source.
