

NEWS of SOCIETY

Edwin A. Nelson and Miss Ethel Long, both of Egin, were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at one o'clock at the parsonage of the Christian church, with Reverend O. W. Jones officiating.

Immediately following the wedding the happy young couple left for Union Junction, where they will make their home in the future.

The Westminster Guild had a very interesting meeting last evening when they met at the home of Mrs. Lowell Williamson. Dr. Margaret Ingle read the devotional and Miss Gertrude East had charge of the study, which was on the last chapter of the study book "Ming-Kwong." Miss Helen Williams played two beautiful piano numbers and Miss Isabelle sang a selection in her usual excellent voice.

At the close of the program dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Maxville (Special)—A delightful dance and watch party was given at the Log Cabin New Year's eve. A large number of Maxville's people were present and everyone reported a good time.

Maxville (Special)—Chas. Snaford, H. B. Votberg and Wallace Wilson gave a dinner dance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. MacKenzie recently.

Knowledge Of Meat Cuts Is Limited

CHICAGO, Ill. (Special)—In spite of the fact that the majority of American housewives shop personally for the family meat, their knowledge of the various cuts and grades is most limited. These facts were revealed in a preliminary report of government experts to the National Live Stock and Meat Board regarding a survey of the retail meat trade being conducted by the U. S. department of Agriculture throughout the United States.

Practically 75 per cent of the women interviewed to determine the consumer's habits regarding meat stated that they go to the shops themselves for their meat supply, says the report. About one family out of seven depends on the telephone to make purchases and the man of the family in the purchasing agent in one out of ten families.

Knowledge Limited.

On the other hand, most of the women questioned were familiar with only two or three steaks and the number of roasts known to them was less than two. The general lack of information on the part of the consumer further emphasizes that the housewife is not a careful purchaser in making meat selections, concludes the report. These deficiencies together with a number of others were asked of housewives of all circumstances.

Beef is apparently the favorite meat of the American household. Results of the Department of Agriculture survey showed that three out of five families prefer this meat. To further quote the findings of the investigators: "In every group beef was rated as the favorite kind of meat. Pork was rated second choice by the poor families and lamb was second favorite among the well-to-do families. Veal was generally not used with the exception of the Italians who indicated that veal was nearly as important to them as beef."

Solicitation Ceases.

The day of solicitation of orders by the butcher is gone. The government investigators discovered only a few isolated cases where the market man either called personally or by phone to secure business.

The neighborhood market is a popular place to trade, according to the survey. Sixty-one per cent of the population purchases meat from shops that are within a radius of less than three blocks from their homes. Only 25 per cent are in the habit of going five blocks or more in order to make meat purchases. Forty-three per cent buy their meat from the nearest dealer, 18 per cent from the next to the nearest dealer and 9 per cent are in the habit of passing two shops to reach their regular store. It was further determined that only 23 per cent purchased their meat from shops which were so distant from their homes that there were five or more shops in between.

Quality important.

It appears that quality and meat that is satisfactory are the chief attractions drawing the housewife to a particular market. Upon this subject the government report says that unless housewives know a great deal more about quality than they do about cuts, their actual knowledge of quality is very limited.

Convenience was mentioned as the second most important factor. Thirty per cent of the interviewed were controlled in their choice of shops by geographical location.

Fashion Notes

New York.—Bargains are beckoning feminine shoppers here today, especially in furs. Few new designs are on view, but the models which have been popular all winter in leopard, cat, mink, ermine, broadtail, caracul are being sold well below former price levels. The woolen mode for trimmed coats have been reduced as much as one third in some instances.

New York.—"Out damned spot" would be an unpopular line for even Shakespeare to sponsor at present. For many of the new silks for winter resort wear are printed in polka dot designs. The lots advanced in size from pin-head proportions to blots of color the size of a half dollar.

Paris.—The Egyptian influence still is strong in dress for all the Egyptians were so little. Many of the new kasha straight line frocks are embellished at the hips by embroidery which gives the appearance of the Egyptian figures in the ancient hieroglyphics.

Paris.—The hanging ends of a scarf are no novelty on an afternoon frock, but when they appear through a slit in the front of the frock at the waist line with no indications of where the remainder of the scarf is wound they are distinctly irritating.

London.—The Gurnsey fisherman has been robbed of the design of his jersey for the benefit of the feminine color. The new silvers for golf are of silk and wool, but warm and have a high close fitting double collar coming close around the throat.

London.—It seems incongruous that the latest models of ski boots should come from South Africa, but it is nevertheless true. These boots are made on the style of the well-known of the Boers with broad square toes. They are fitted so as to allow for thick double socks.

New York.—There was a time when halibut was regarded as a material for men's lightweight underwear. Nowadays, however, it is being extensively used for jumpers frocks for Florida and California use.

New York.—Women nowadays are selecting shoes with regard to heel width. That is, a spike heel should go with a foot which is narrow and a broad low heel with a broad foot.

England Asked to Celebrate Surrender of Cornwallis

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP)—Interest extending overseas is claimed for the proposed sesqui-centennial celebration of the British surrender at Yorktown, sponsored by the Kiwanis club of Newport News for October 19, 1931.

International participation will be sought in the payment to be presented showing the actual surrender of Cornwallis to Washington, after scenes of the early colonial period shall have led up to the climax.

Invited to take part are all the states; the army and navy as well as other agencies of the United States government, the French and British navies and many historical societies.

Sponsors of the celebration request cordial co-operation assured from many organizations and societies in the United States and abroad.

Congress will be asked to appropriate at least $50,000 to cover the expense of the national government's participation. The states will also be urged to provide funds. It is proposed to have a special postage stamp issued to aid in advertising the celebration.

Air Mail Routes Expand.

HAMBURG, (AP)—London, Amsterdam, Hamburg and Malmoe, Sweden, will be linked together early next year by a daily air mail and passenger service. English and German machines will be used.

Cod Liver Oil in Sugar Coated Tablets For Puny Kids

Forget the nasty tasting, stomach upsetting cod liver oil and give the thin, puny, undeveloped children McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets if you want to give them a good appetite and put pounds of good, healthy flesh on their bones.

Doctors know all about them and so does Red Cross Drug Co., Glass Drugs, Inc., L. & L. Drugs, and all good pharmacists all over America, for they are in great demand because they are not lacerants but show results in a few days.

They are not expensive either—60 tablets—45 cents and children take them like candy.

A very sickly child, age 9, gained 12 pounds in seven months and is strong and healthy.

One skinny woman gained 9 pounds in 24 days.

Be sure to get McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.—Adv.

PRINTERS ASKED TO NOT FORGET BEN FRANKLIN

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Printers in the United States are asked to observe the anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin, Jan. 17, 1706, in a statement issued by James M. Lynch, president of the International Typographical Union, which has headquarters here.

President Lynch will address a banquet of the Old Time Printers' association in Chicago on that date, and has urged associations in other cities to plan suitable observances.

"Franklin, as a historical figure, is deserving of a larger share of attention than he has received in the past," Mr. Lynch said. "It is proper that printers should pay tribute annually to their patron saint. Franklin's life and philosophy offer a special model for his fellow craftsmen. His career as a printer, business man, writer, statesman, man of science and diplomat reveals the heights to which a journeyman printer may rise."

Benjamin Franklin was born in Boston in 1706, and took up the printing trade at an early age.

Loan Tax Delinquency Small.

ALBANY, Ore.—Delinquent tax on in-lana county from last year amounted to only $47,297.14, or four per cent of the total, which was $1,196,944.46. A total of $1,659,107.22 has been turned over to the treasurer by the sheriff. The delinquency last year was about seven per cent of the total.

FRANCE LOSES HER BEST ART

PARIS (AP)—The exodus of French historic antiquities to America is an imminent danger, the Duke of Yveline declared in a recent address before the Faubourg club. The speaker, while regretting the loss of irreplaceable ancient treasures, as a man of common sense as well as a lover of art, said he did not blame those who buy and carry off these vestiges of long ago, but that he sought to make such sales more difficult, if not impossible. "If means are not found to stop this exodus," he continued, "the towns and country sites will be deprived of their finest historic and artistic objects."

"Any property owner in France can cut his house up and sell the stones, facade, windows, roofs, ornaments, and trunks, or the iron work of the wells, without even informing the Fine Arts department, so long as it has not been classified, and very few buildings are classified," the duke said.

An object classified as of national interest, it should be explained, cannot be sold without the authorization of the Fine Arts department of the government.

"In 1921 a law was passed that put an embargo on all such commodities, pictures and objects of art as well as tapestries and architectural fragments, but dealers complained so of the way the law interfered with business that it was repealed, and consequently French art treasures are no longer protected."

"The feelings of Americans toward France are so generous and delicate that they would never buy architectural fragments if they were aware how deeply the loss of such things was regretted where the objects had been."

"Not long ago an American bought an extraordinary fine statue of the Virgin for 300,000 francs but before delivery he asked the antiquity dealer if he could prove that this statue had not been stolen. This occurred in 1923, when the stolen statue from the St. Saviour church was causing much talk. When the dealer refused he could not give the required proof, the American collector preferred to cancel his purchase rather than become an accomplice in a theft.

"Last July an appeal was made to save the Roman arches of Saint Martory, which had been bought by a dealer for 19,000 francs, and at once an American woman who has lived a long time in France, sent a check which no doubt will enable us to save this monument."
