Elgin (Special)—A very enjoyable afternoon was spent last Thursday at the home of Mrs. R. L. Shoemaker, when the Women's club met for the regular meeting. After a brief business session the afternoon was spent socially. The outstanding feature of the afternoon was a reading from "Aunt Jane of Kentucky" by Mrs. W. A. Armstrong. A contest in which all present took part was followed by dainty refreshments. About twenty-five members and guests were present.

Jazzy Touch

FIGURED crepe de chine in black, white and red makes this Palm Beach frock that is given a jazzy touch by a wide tie and bandings of plain red crepe de chine. The revers have an original cut and fall in a flattering, soft line, and the elbow sleeve offers a compromise between the long and sleeveless models.

200 NAMED FOR DIRVE

CORVALLIS, Ore.—In preparation for the coming memorial union campaign to raise $200,000 on the campus to build the memorial building, new committees of more than 200 workers have been appointed by Lindsey Spight, general manager of the campus drive and president of the board of governors of the memorial union.

An intensive drive to last but three days necessitates the large committees. Every activity of students during the days of the campaign will be centered on raising their quota. Individual assistance and support from the student body as a whole is counted on by Spight to put the campaign over successfully.

East To Witness Total Eclipse of Sunday Jan. 24

Partial Obstruction of Old Sol's Face to Be Visible From Middle Western States; Scientists Plan to Get Photographs.

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Millions of Americans will see, on Saturday, January 24, something they probably never will see again, a total eclipse over the greater part of the United States. There will not be another in more than a century.

Those who live within a belt 100 miles wide and 5,000 miles long ranging from northern Minnesota across northern Wisconsin and Michigan, the Great Lakes to New York, Long Island, Connecticut and Rhode Island, parts of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Massachusetts—will see the flaming sun blotted out on the morning of the twenty-fourth. Those who live near this path across the country—a path that ends at sunset near the north of Scotland—will see the sun shadowed in part, the extent depending on how near they live to this belt.

Total Eclipse.

In Duluth, Buffalo, New York City, New Haven and many other large cities the eclipse will be total. The partial eclipse will be very large, nearly total, in some of the largest cities including Boston, Providence, Albany, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Chicago. As far south as New Orleans, and as far west as St. Louis and Omaha, the partial eclipse will be large.

In most of the central states the sun will rise more or less eclipsed; out from Lake Erie eastward, all of the eclipse will take place after the sun has risen.

In New York City the total eclipse will take place about 9:10 a. m., and the time of the greatest eclipse for most of the cities in the east that keep Eastern Standard Time will vary but a few minutes from that. The partial eclipse will begin about eight o'clock in the same section and the eclipse will be over about half-past ten.

When the eclipse becomes total the brighter stars and planets appear and also the beautiful solar corona that the astronomer is so anxious to study. This is a magnificent halo of pearly light extending to a great distance from the sun and different in shape and appearance at every eclipse, says a special bulletin of the American Nature Association. It is never visible except during a total solar eclipse and can be studied only at that time because its light is so faint that the glare of sunlight in the daytime hides it from view. It is only when the moon obligingly comes between sun and earth and shuts out the light of the sun that the corona shines forth in all its wonderful beauty.

Watch For "Bands."

"All those who find themselves within the path of total eclipse should look for the shadow bands, wavy bands of light and shade that flit over the landscape and buildings just before and after the total eclipse," says the bulletin.

They should look out for the interesting phenomenon known as "Baily's Beads," which are seen as the thin, thread-like solar crescent breaks up into beads of light as the total eclipse is about to begin, and which are seen again just as it ends.

"Look also for the scarlet solar prominences during the total eclipse which are flames of glowing gases of hydrogen and helium rising from the hidden surface of the moon to heights of thousands of miles and visible beyond the edge of the moon in queer forms and shapes.

"The brighter stars and planets appear during the total eclipse, and even a little before and after it. The three planets, Venus, Mercury and Jupiter, should be seen in a close group some distance to the southwest of the sun. But above all else do not fail to make the most of your opportunities to observe the wonderful and mysterious corona which can never be seen except when the sun is totally eclipsed and which very few people ever have the good fortune to see.

Skies at Best.

"Although the event of this one day towers all others by comparison in the January skies, it is in midwinter that evening skies are at their best, the American Nature Association points out there are more brilliant stars in view than at any other time of the year, sparkling more when the denser air is cold and frosty. If one could look at the stars outside of the earth's atmosphere, he would find that they do not sparkle at all but shine with a clear, steady light.

"We would see the stars in the daytime, too, as well as at night, for it is the atmosphere that scatters the light of the sun and makes the glare of light all over the sky the hide the stars from view by day. If we could do our stargazing from the moon, we would be surprised to find the sky thickly studded with stars in the daytime, for on the moon there is little, if any, air."

Man Convicted, Sentenced, Freed

OREGON CITY, Ore. — Mike Lang was freed from the county jail here following an order from the circuit court by Judge Campbell reversing a decision of E. J. Noble, justice of the peace, and setting aside his sentence of one year and a fine of $2000 imposed for alleged possession of a still. The judgment in justice court was rendered by Judge Noble without jurisdiction, according to the order from the circuit court.

Interest In Classes At High Point

(By M. M. M.)

Much interest is evident in the Smith-Hughes millinery and dressmaking classes being established here, according to the number of women present last evening at the primary room of the Methodist church to take their first lesson in millinery. This morning at 9 o'clock an equally large number gathered at the banquet room of the Elks temple for their first lesson in dressmaking.

Marie Thompson, instructor in this work, the only one in this part of the state, explained the object of the Smith-Hughes classes and told of classes in other towns and their success. Classes have been established at western Oregon points for some time, but, for various reasons there has never been a class of this kind before in this part of the state.

5 Cities Enrolled.

Mrs. Thompson has classes at La Grande, Baker, Haines, North Powder and Union and later expects to begin work at Pendleton and surrounding small towns.

Any instructor in this work must have been, before taking up the work, a successful milliner or modiste and is asked by the state board to take the classes. The fee for one of these courses is very small, one dollar of which is sent to the State Board at Salem, with the name and address of the student, the other is deposited in a local bank to pay local expenses, which are also small.

Four classes are now at work in La Grande on Monday and Tuesday of each week. A dressmaking class is at work on Monday afternoon, millinery, Monday evening, dressmaking Tuesday morning and millinery, Tuesday afternoon. The courses vary from 8 to 12 weeks in length. Two of the present classes will re-enroll in three more weeks into advanced classes.

Fashion Notes

London. — Some of the Regent street bootmakers, having about exhausted ingenuity in devising curved and circular cutouts for evening shoes, are adopting the cubist patterns where all cutouts are squares or angles.

London. — The vogue of long white gloves for evening wear, long fallen into disuse, has been sharply revived in the early January social festivities. Many well-dressed women prefer gloves which come just above the elbow to the longer lengths.

Paris.—With the tube dresses so universal at present, it takes a navigator with a sextant to determine just where a waist line is located. In some of Jean Patou's newest creations, only the marking of the waist line is the start of the godets which enliven the silhouettes.

Paris.—Some of the very latest of evening dress models show a suspicion of fullness. But like the inebriated gentlemen this is noticeable only when in motion. The material used is mousseline de soir, and by the use of godets encrusted with silver or gold lace, appearance of floating grace is given when the wearer moves.

New York.—More money is going into tapestry today than ever before. The most popular of the flat envelope bags carried by American women are of that material. Many of the bags are finished with gold clasps.

New York.—Awning striped one-piece frocks of linen, flannel or mercerized cotton fabrics will be conspicuous on many Southern golf courses in the next few weeks.

New York.—The slip-on type of pajama coat is really popular at present in various materials. These jackets are neckeless with V necks and much of their ornamentation is devoted to pockets which are placed low and in front.

New York.—A worms-eye view at the Southern resorts this season is going to find loudly patterned stockings in the foreground. They usually have a white base with thick and thin stripes in pastel shades.

In London, a hotel was dynamited. Well, this is just one time the rooms were a little higher than usual.

Wrong news from New York. Expert says men do all things better than women. Bet he never tried to kiss a man.

Reports from all sections of the country indicate practically all of the turkey hash has been eaten.

All pessimists are not dead, but one is. St. Louis man asked to be buried without any clothes.
