Use Water Treatments—

Ailing Europeans take water treatments on their cores for nearly everything from dandruff to falling arches. Their faith in the healing qualities of chemical ligatures, both internal and external, is no less deeply established than that of certain Americans in the efficacy of whiskey. But the number of Americans who are coming to the European view is increasing constantly and rapidly, and in time Hot Lake, Ore., may become the Baden or Carlsbad of the United States.

Pathologists and bacteriologists both agree as to the highly curative properties of the waters of Hot Lake. Dr. W. T. Pyle, who operates the sanatorium at Hot Lake was in Portland yesterday and told of improvements to be made there next summer. The sanatorium now although it is ordinarily the lightest season, is filled to capacity, he said, and it will be necessary to add 50 rooms by summer. A large laundry also will be constructed. "The waters are equal to any curative properties," he said. "The efficacy of these treatments is bound to become in the United States as they are now in Europe, and Hot Lake will become one of the best known sanatoriums in the world." Dr. Pyle is at the Imperial hotel, Oregonian.

HE OVERSLEPT

One of our friends recently told us that the only time he ever wanted to complain about a Kaniteck Hot Water Bottle was when he overslept himself. He was too comfortable in bed to get up.

Kaniteck Hot Water Bottles

certainly have made thousands of people very comfortably and they don't have to worry, because a Kaniteck bottle can't leak—and there are no seams of patches or splicing or draining, and yet a Kaniteck Hot Water Bottle costs only $2.50 and it's guaranteed 2 years.

U. S. FOREIGN POLICY SAME

WASHINGTON (AP)—While House announcement was made late Thursday to deposit any legislation that the retirement of Secretary Hughes from the cabinet involved impending changes in the administration's foreign policy.

President Coolidge gave no reason to alter the general course he has been pursuing with regard to foreign relations. While he expects that American foreign policy will develop and enlarge to keep pace with the march of world events, there is no prospect that the principles governing the attitude of the Washington government on specific questions will be subject to change during the administration beginning March 4.

The president has been more familiar with the details of the nation's foreign relations from day to day since he took office than he has been with the specific problems of governmental departments having to do with foreign matters, Hughes' committee chief.

Secretary Hughes, it was pointed out at the White House, has completed his chief work, regard to every decision of importance. It was necessary for the state department to make the president being charged directly under the constitution with the conduct of foreign relations and this practice will continue after Ambassador Kellogg succeeds Mr. Hughes.

The non-recognition policy, toward Russia, always strongly advocated by Mr. Hughes will remain unchanged so long as conditions remain as they are.

President Coolidge has not changed his mind with regard to Russia since his associate in congress in 1922 and since the more recent communication by Secretary Hughes in answer to a declaration which called on him to bring Russian recognition.

Other countries which are creating problems are Belgium, Italy, Poland, Japan, Peru, Switzerland, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia, Greece, Spain, Holland, Denmark, Hungary, Ireland, Bulgaria, Sweden, Latvia, Estonia, Cuba, Brazil, Norway, Monaco, Luxembourg, Turkey, Rumania, and the French protectorates of Morocco, Tunisia and Algeria.

The aim of the exhibition is to show that the industry of today presents a picture of progress and that modern life and industry are inseparable. The exhibition is open to all industries.

Hygiene will be given a prominent place. Two hundred years ago there were no bathrooms even in the palaces of the kings. One of the largest floor concessions in the Exposition des Invalides has been allotted to French firms dealing in bath and accessories.

The problem of housing and feeding the thousands of visitors expected in Paris during the exhibition is giving much concern to the Syndicate of Hotel and Restaurant Keepers.

The Turkish and Italian delegations have solved it by building restaurants of their own where all their citizens, citizens employed at the exhibition or merely visitors, will be served at most prices. Dining on the hill of Montmartre, the restaurants are built on steel girders extending over the Seine.

Certainly that would be less unreasonable than leaving the generation of 1925 the new obsolete history of 1915.

Children like children, outgrow adolescent foolishness. Washington is now old enough to be given a little responsibility of its own. And a little freedom from leading strings.

Many Americans have the erroneous idea that the monarch is a distinctive British affection. Perhaps that is due to the caricatures, who love to draw "typical" Britishers with a long tunic girded in one eye.

Perhaps, however, that the single exception is a part of the warlike of the properly dressed gent in many of the mid-European countries.

And the most expert of the monarchs in Washington in George Desart's Memo of the Humanian legation.

It was stated animals with this gland, provided it was not given by the month, but under the skin, in body cavities, where it would not come in contact with the digestive juices and was administered daily rather than at irregular intervals we could turn normal animals into giants.

It is stated that efforts are being made by him and his associates to modify the pituitary gland and so that it might even be used in human cases as a restorative. Relating his success in regulating propagation of animals with glandular nutrition, Doctor Evans said:

"The next point which arises is just how this will concern the practical problems of human welfare. It is difficult to make any statement regarding the practical significance of the work, primarily because we have determined that the vitamin in abundance distributed in common foods."

may be taken into the higher courts without the services of the witness except in the first trial.

Of some interest was a demand threatening suit from Elizabeth Burke for damages alleged to have been done to her place of business while in the hands of prohibition agents headed by Lou Garner, in the employ of the city. An amended bill was presented before the commission covering breakage of dishes, damage to property and loss in business prestige to the amount of $1541.80. The claim was turned over to the city manager and the city attorney for investigation.

A bill from L. R. Stockton of Baker for engineering services in connection with the investigation of the water system and the proposed project of a sewerage system was presented. The bill was held over for investigation as the services were performed last year during the time the former commissioners were in office.

Toward the close of the meeting the commissioners engaged in an informal discussion of the water problem but no definite action was taken.

WOOL GROWERS' OUTLOOK ROSY

shared in his talk on marketing. He advocated orderly sales of wool as against the wasteful method of dumping the fleeces on the market.

These fleeces explained. E. N. Kavanagh, assistant district forester of the Pendleton district, told the wool growers that sheepmen by their methods of shepherding for range had set up false values on grading wool that had an influence in making necessary increase in grazing fees to apply this effect this year on national forest land.

Conservative methods should be followed by sheep men to keep their business on a safe and sound basis, Mr. Falconer declared, after he had pointed out the extent of profits that come to producers of wool and mutton. The industry had to weather periods when wool markets were not high enough to pay cost of production, and such periods might reasonably be expected to appear again. Sinking funds should be established to provide for such emergencies in advance, with greater confidence now than during any time since 1920, he declared.
