Mother's Vision Brings Mercy to Her Daughter

(Continued from Page 1.) That is why, when her mother warned her that another late party would bring dire consequences, she shot her mother and went about her way—to another party.

What makes it possible for her to be so brazen and merciless? Her background is ordinary. There was no poverty. Her father and mother quarreled and separated over Dorothy herself.

The brother, Earl, estranged himself when the girl, at the age of 12, started associating with men. If there was strife in her family it was the effect of her waywardness rather than its cause.

Scientists say she is a moron; that she inherits abnormally perhaps two or three generations back.

But, while scientists discuss her, while newspaper editorialize and call her the jazz-girl, while preachers talk of Dorothy the immoral, she rests easily in her cell.

Laughs With Life—Only the reconciliation with her father and brother moved her—and then only for the moment.

Dorothy, abnormal in her poise and in her sense of romance and subnormal in sense of love and responsibility, is yet laughing with life.

She is the prima donna of her own tragedy.

IDAHO TOWNS SEEK SESSION

The convention, which closed Friday, while town business like due to the numerous entertainment attractions of San Francisco, is recorded as an important one, in view of the action taken in advocating a public lands commission to study the range question and make recommendations to congress that will yield a uniform and stabilized national policy.

ADOPT MANY RESOLUTIONS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Frank J. Hagenbath of Spencer, Idaho, was re-elected president of the National Woolgrowers' association at the closing session of the annual convention here Friday.

The three vice presidents, who were also re-elected, are F. A. Eitzenwood, California; A. A. Johns, Arizona; and W. C. Coffey, Minnesota.

New members of the executive committee are Kenneth Chalmers, Colorado; Clyde Bacon, Idaho; and C. H. Williams, Montana.

MANY WITNESS M. I. A. DRAMA

The North Side M. I. A. of the L. D. S. church gave an interesting play last evening at the high school auditorium with a large crowd in attendance. The drama "My Brother's Keeper," is a three-act comedy and each role of the following cast was excellent:

Able Benton—Don Smith; Mac Allen—T. Hendrickson; Richard Barnes—E. Kilpack; Charley Benton—C. Conwell; Scrape—Glen Hallmark; Rachel Allen—Zetona Samelson; Grace Benton—Eva Carlisle; Aunt Hedy—Mrs. M. Maxwell.

Besides the play several musical numbers were rendered by the following people: Miss Baxter, Union; Ira Maxwell, La Grande; Madam "Mc" O'w, Haines; T. Hendrickson, La Grande.

At the beginning of the program a six piece orchestra played "Castle Chimes" and "June Night." The members of the orchestra are: Piano, Leone Baxter; violin, Messrs. Wheeler and Anderson; saxophone, Val Welch; Baritone, Ira Maxwell; drums, N. Coombs; trombone, T. Hendrickson.

The entire program was under the able direction of T. Hendrickson.

"They were married out there, and often around the cabin hearthstone in my boyhood days I heard the story of the pioneers. There was hardly a family without a story of an unknown grave somewhere along the trail. Very often the body of a child or some other member of the family was buried in the center of the road, so that the whims of the covered wagons following would obliterate the grave and prevent the Indians from exhuming the bones.

Indian Was Recalled.—"The assistance rendered this government by the people who built up the west did not end with the migration. In the Civil war, where there was grave need for all federal troops in the fighting in the south, the pioneers were called upon to protect the western country from the Indians, so they took down their old flint locks and muskets and fought the Indians there, thus permitting the withdrawal of federal troops that had been sent there for that purpose."

Representative Smith of Idaho referred to the importance of the old trail to his state, and said he would offer some amendments at the proper time.

C. S. Guyer, a representative from Kansas, endorsed the bill. The committee will meet again next week, date not set, to consider the bill.

Worded Houses Opposition.—Representative Leatherwood of Utah gave notice that he and Senator Smoot desired to file some data in opposition to the bill as at present drawn because it makes mention of the Mormon trail.

Interdenominational Religious School Aim

of the evangelist's original functions, that of establishing in Washington some outstanding and adequate Presbyterian center, in favor of merging Presbyterian centers with that of other denominations for a larger ideal.

The National Capital Presbyterian commission was established by the Presbyterian General assembly in 1922 with a view to studying and promoting the religious interests of the national capital so far as the Presbyterian church might have responsibility.

The commission consists of Chairman Stewart and the following: Rev. Charles Wood, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Wallace Hadfield, Washington, D. C.; Rev. John C. Palmer, Washington, D. C.; Rev. John Timothy Stone, Chicago, Ill.; Thomas E. Finnegan, Washington, D. C.; Harrison H. Smith, Charles, W. Va.; Bayard Henry, Philadelphia; Dr. John M. T. Finney, Baltimore, Md.; George W. Park, New York City; Leonard Coagwell, Jr., Albany, N. Y.; A. C. Ernest, Cleveland, Ohio.

Cannot Find Call.—Dr. Stewart finds it apparent that "the call for a great and effective institute in the city of Washington to teach the religious and theological disciplines and to prepare men and women for the many vocations in one that the whole evangelical church should hear and answer.

"Therefore," he adds, "if any group of persons identified with the evangelical Christian churches will undertake seriously and energetically to solve the problem which the Presbyterian commission sees to exist in this field, the commission would doubtless address the question of its withdrawal from further separate consideration of the matter, while at the same time offering such cooperation as might seem to be wise."

Dr. Stewart says his plan is prepared in the hope of reaching some adequate solution of the "vastly important problem in religious education facing the Protestant Christian church."

He holds that this is the "laymen's age" that the "energy are no longer the sole authority," and that the "church now is seeking to discharge many functions through a somewhat extensive organization of its members. Hence, the ministers need training along many new lines, and the church requires a large body of trained lay leaders and workers."

Doubtless, he holds, there are too many theological seminaries for present-day conditions. He feels that the need in the field of ministerial training might be met by consolidating some of the existing seminaries in some well-chosen center. He points out the need for a new type of seminary, and holds that Washington seems to meet the conditions.

"While the church," he says, "has shown commendable zeal in the training of her ministers, she has made and is making but a halting and pitifully meagre effort in the training of her laymen."

He would have ministers and laymen who are to work together, side by side, study in the same atmosphere, and in neighboring though separate schools, for the sake of mutual understanding and harmony in their subsequent labors.

"The church has been all too negligent of her ministers," he adds, "after they have completed their preparation for their high office. There ought to be incorporated into the scheme for ministerial training provisions of sundry kinds for keeping the ministers up to concert pitch in ministerial efficiency."

Discusses Purpose.—Discussing the purpose of the proposed foundation Dr. Stewart says: "This does not mean the segregation of religious education from secular education. It does not warrant, nor would it produce, a narrow type of religious life and character. On the contrary, it would call to its services all available secular learning, and there are vast stores of it within easy access of the capital; and it would seek the most influential and vital contacts with every human interest. It should by every consideration produce Christian leadership the most intelligent, the most broadly cultured, the most devoted to human welfare and well-being."

"The institute should be the exponent and the acknowledged representative of the highest type of evangelical Christianity. It should be in close affiliation with and should seek to serve all of the evangelical churches, with sympathetic relationship to the whole brotherhood of Christ.

"Protestant evangelical Christianity could not in any single way more effectively proclaim its message and discharge its mission in this free American republic than by founding and maintaining for this land and the world this institute of religion in the national capital.

The aid should be to produce symmetrical men and women, fully equipped, spiritually, intellectually, socially, physically, for the strenuous and exacting religious vocations. The graduates of this institution should be men and women of a sane, warm and vital piety, with well-informed and cultured minds, knowing folks and how to get on with them in all
