U. M. W. A. AIDS MANY WORKERS

NEW YORK, (AP)—The United Mine Workers of America announce that despite national prosperity elsewhere, they are conducting a relief program on a large scale for members now out of work through strikes and lock-outs. Union officials say that since last April the relief has amounted to "many millions of dollars." Hundreds of thousands of dollars being paid out monthly, and that it care for what now amounts to 129,000 destitute miners and their families in various strike districts. The 500,000 members of the organization as a whole, they say contribute this expenditure, which will be continued "until the strikes are won."

The unemployment affects bituminous coal fields, particularly in Southern West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee. The union states the trouble from what it terms the failure of mine owners here to accept the Jacksonville agreement of December, 1923. In other years the basis scale had usually been adopted throughout the industry at large. Mine owners in the present strike areas, however, opposed the Jacksonville scale as being too high for their high cost workings and as one which they could not pay, especially when in competition with lower scales paid in other non-union fields. The miners stood upon the basic agreement and fought any cut. The United Mine Workers' organization stands behind men in the position they have taken so fight cut. When evictions from company-owned houses follow, the union assumes their family burdens. It finances the fund needed to provide cottages, barracks or tents for relief camps and cottages scattered among the hills and mountains. It pays moving expenses; supplies food, clothing and fuel; secures medical attention for the sick, and approves the bill of the undertaker burying those who die.

The Kanawha fields in southern West Virginia, which the union cites as an example of the functioning of its relief machinery, received $82,000 in relief funds in December alone. The union there bought a tract of 60 lots for $1,500 and built 120 cottages for $15,000 to provide a roof for some of the 1,500 miners' families evicted.

On the Kanawha River, according to the union, 150 families to the union, 150 families were dispossessed the day before Christmas. Lacking shelter against rain and snow, the women and children were housed in a church, the pews being converted into cots.

On Christmas Day there were 15,000 children living in tents or barracks in West Virginia. The union received $5,000 from the International officials with which it bought ten tons of candy and nuts. This was distributed throughout the area so mothers could put some token in the children's stockings.

Hats were once worn only by freemen; slaves went bareheaded. A freeman voluntarily removed his hat as a symbol of respect and service, which in time became a common occurrence. Thus we take off our hats to ladies.

But about this arms argument and the big guns others are making; wonder what they are aiming at?

"Not One to Spare" Accorded High Honors By Review Board.

The National Board of Review in its report places "Not One to Spare," now at Sherrys, with "America" and "A Boy of Plandria" as the three best films to come before the board.

This high honor follows unprecedented praise for the film from New York critics. Another epochal event in its two weeks' run at the Cameo was a special showing, at the suggestion of Will Hays, the dean of motion picture industry, for the committee on public relations of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors' association.

What Others Think Of "A Man Must Live" Now at the Arcade.

Two of America's best known short story writers, contributors to the Saturday Evening Post and Collier's, paid a visit to the Paramount Long Island studio during the filming of Richard Dix's new picture, "A Man Must Live," and expressed themselves in enthusiastic terms about the production which they viewed in rough form.

The first, William Almon Wolf, said, "I am especially interested in the fine way the story values are kept in the picture. The pitch of the original story is maintained throughout and I got a great kick out of Dix. I think he does great work. It is a fine picture."

The other, William McHaff, had this to say about "A Man Must Live": "It is a peach of a picture and has some of the greatest scenes I ever saw on the screen. The picture is superb all the way through."

"A Man Must Live," which will be shown at the Arcade theater today is sure a handliner. Remember "Manhattan?"

Jacqueline Logan, Edna Murphy appear in support of the star. Others are George Nash, Charles Boyer, Lucius Henderson and Jane Jennings.

Hoop Gibson Here At Star In New Role.

Hoop Gibson has contributed something new in the way of screen humor in his latest photoplay, "40 Horse Hawkins," for Universal, which opens today in the Star theater. He convinces one that seriousness of intent can make for hearty laughter without placing a strain on the credulity of the one who laughs. None could be more serious than Hoop as he goes about his multiplicity of duties; first, as

Ruthless Slaying of Wild Birds Is Menace

NEW YORK, (AP)—The migratory game birds of North America are threatened with practical extinction, in the opinion of Dr. W. T. Hornaday, noted naturalist and defender of wild birds and animals. Ducks and geese may come to the vanishing point in ten years if the present rate of slaughter continues. "The doom of our non-migratory birds, as well as mounted unless big game are immediately reduced," Dr. Hornaday declares.

"An army of 6,000,000 hunters equipped with the most modern devices of slaughter has reduced to a certainty the practical extermination of the game birds if the present unparalleled rate of destruction continues," the speaker said. "There has never before been anything equaling the present pursuit of bird life in American history. Not even the destruction of the buffalo was more persistent or widespread."

"It is generally admitted that the automobile has doubled the perils of the game, because it has placed every stretch of water where ducks may be reported, and every hunting ground within the reach of hunters living within a radius of 200 miles or more."

"Under the ruling of the Department of Agriculture the bag limit that may be shot by a single hunter in one day is 25 ducks of all kinds, except the wood duck and waterfowl, and eight geese and eight quail. The season lasts for three months or more. These limits are most wasteful. No man or ordinary sized family can eat 25 ducks in one day, nor more than one-fifth of that number, and since their sale is forbidden in most states, indications are that a large percentage of a full bag must be given away or become a loss by decay."

"The awful limit of 25 ducks a day now prevails in 29 states, fatally including all the states where the ducks find winter feed, and where they congregate in greatest numbers in winter. Although no hunter gets his limit every day, and in many states where ducks were once plentiful he will now be fortunate if he kills one duck, yet in those diminishing areas where ducks seek winter protection and food, he often gets the limit by the time most of us are breakfasting."

"Without further legal restrictions, in ten years our migratory game birds will have become so shot to pieces and weakened as to be reduced to the vanishing point. Unless steps are taken further to protect the birds again the millions of hunters arrayed against them for three months of the year the slaughter will automatically make duck shooting a thing of the past, and many species may pass permanently from our list of game birds. I appeal not only to the sportsmen but to all bird lovers, to the women of the country, to all others who are interested in preserving our wild life for future generations, to act now, before it is too late."

The William Pen Charter of Liberty was exhibited under strong guard at Independence Hall, beginning the first of the year, until it could be transferred to the state archives at Harrisburg, Pa.

Even though it was an army dentist a soldier shot at in Washington, we say he shouldn't have done it.
